POW leader recalls brutal Hanoi march

By Capt. Jeremiah A. Denton Jr., USN
As told to Kathryn Johnson
Associated Press Writer

I'd like to take you to the Hanoi March. A night of brutal spectacle, with the population having at us as we went through the streets and a night in which many men were tortured for confessions at the Hilton and the Zoo.

The North Vietnamese frustration and indignation against what our country was doing and what the POWs were doing, and not doing, reached a peak in the summer of 1966.

It was a year of terror tactics against the entire mass of POWs rather than against groups or individuals as later.

They were getting not only biographies but confessions from many men in their anger and I believe in an effort to intimidate American actions in the war by proffering us as hostages.

They began to threaten war crime trials. This pitch of indignation reached its highest form of expression during the Hanoi March.

Late in the afternoon of July 6, we heard many doors opening in the camp and a number of us were taken to several large rooms, blindfolded and handcuffed in pairs. Although many guards were watching us, we were able to communicate names by whispering to one another and by tapping on the adjacent man's knee or thigh.

My partner was Bob Peel, who is a very brave young man. It was the first time I was that close to an American, of course, and somehow I sensed the North Vietnamese were about to make some sort of spectacular display that would redound to their disadvantage.

They gave us a lecture in which they were vague about what we were going to do that evening but did let us know they were going to take a trip and strongly warned against communicating. One of the officers screamed at us that if we communicated on the trip, we'd be killed.

We were told we would be paraded through the streets so the people could demonstrate their anger to us. My over-all impression of their aim at this time is that they planned a spectacle which would humiliate us.

We were unloaded downtown and lined up in columns on a main street, about 10 yards between pairs. Right in front of me was one of several trucks loaded with news correspondents, big still cameras and big movie cameras.

Before we started moving and as the cameras began to roll, I tried my best to look as unrepentant as I could.

I unbuttoned to look carefree. I made an obscene gesture toward the crowd.

At that point one of the guards told Bob and me, "You will have to bow your heads."

Suddenly I comprehended the whole idea. So I shouted an order up ahead: "Nobody bows his head. Pass the word."

And I turned and shouted the same thing to the pair behind me.

I believe that I'm not the only one who gave that order but I gave it. I'm pretty sure the order was passed throughout.

The march began. The people were screaming. I think they were screaming something like, "kowtow, kowtow."

We did not bow our heads.

The army's part in this was to simply bend us through the street at bayonet point and afford the proper expression of subjugation and repentance.

As the march progressed, we began to tire and sweat profusely, having had no recent, comparable exercise. The crowd was standing about 15 deep on each side of the street and the heat from all the bodies was tremendous.

The big object of the parade was to bow our heads as we went through the streets.

As far as I could see no heads bowed, but if any did I think it was from sheer fatigue and not intimidation.

The crowd became thicker and more intense. One woman — I'd judge her age at about 50 — threw a big rock at me from behind. We were frequently hit by guards and our faces, lips, jaws and foreheads were bleeding.

The next time a woman threw a rock, she successfully connected and knocked me off my feet.

They kept pulling us by the ears. I knew they were making asses of themselves.

The most irritating part of the march was a man about eight inches shorter than I, who would break through the cordon, sneak up and give me a left hook in the groin.

I practiced throwing a one-two punch at him, counting one, two, three,

Tornadoes, floods hit Deep South

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flood conditions worsened today along the rain-swollen Mississippi River and in the South, where torrential rains accompanied by tornadoes battered portions of two states during the weekend.

Snow was still piling up in the Southwest, and strong winds whipped sandstorms in southwestern areas not hit by the snow.

Heavy snow warnings were posted for the mountains of southwest and central Colorado, central and western Arizona and New Mexico. More than a foot of new snow fell Sunday in Utah.

Flash flood watches were posted for portions of southern New England, where a weekend thunderstorm dumped up to 3½ inches of rain.

Fair weather prevailed from the mid-Atlantic coast west to the southern Plains and over most of California.

In Alton, Ill., the Mississippi swirled through downtown streets. Spokesmen for the Army Corps of Engineers expressed fear Sunday night that levees, soaked to the core, might give way as waters rise on the Mississippi, Missouri and Meramec rivers.

The cleanup from Saturday night's tornadoes was going on beside flood preparation today in portions of Georgia and South Carolina. The twisters, which struck before National Weather Service radar could spot them, inflicted severe property damage and claimed at least eight lives.

Govs. John West of South Carolina and Jimmy Carter of Georgia surveyed the damage by air Sunday. Both said they would seek federal disaster funds. In Georgia, an estimated 5,000 persons were left homeless by the storm.

The Pee Dee River at Cheraw, S.C., was expected to reach a crest of 15 feet above bank level early today, and the Rocky River at Norwood, S.C., was 23 feet above flood stage Sunday.

High winds in Fairfax County, Va., near Washington, drove 76 families from their homes, caused heavy damages at at least 16 stores and forced the closing today of a school.

Republican Senate offices said bugged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican member of the Senate Watergate investigating committee says two GOP senators were among targets of spies working for President Nixon's re-election last year.

That and other statements alleging political espionage by the Committee for the Re-election of the President were made Sunday by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., and denounced by a spokesman for the Nixon committee as "absolutely, categorically, undeniably" false.

Weicker said also he believes White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman was so closely involved with the Committee for the Re-election of the President that he "had to know what was going on," in the way of political espionage.

He said Republican campaign aides were "almost competitive as to who could do the dirtiest deed." Weicker said he had been told by Alfred C. Baldwin that office activities of Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., were among those marked for surveillance.

Baldwin, a former FBI agent, has testified he was hired to wiretap Democratic telephone calls.

Weicker said Baldwin told him he had been ordered by convicted Watergate burglar James W. McCord to stake out those offices and several others on Capitol Hill.

Baldwin, he said, had been told to watch the comings and goings from the offices of Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine; William Proxmire, D-Wis.; Mike Gravel, D-Alaska; and Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y.

Weicker said this surveillance was on the "exhibition schedule" of the alleged spies leading to what he called the main event: Bugging Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office building and spying on Democratic leaders at the party's convention in Miami Beach, Fla.

He said the June 17 arrests inside the Watergate foiled plans laid for that weekend to break into the presidential campaign headquarters of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and to fly to Miami to bug the telephones of Democratic Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien and other party leaders.

Move protests high prices

Meat boycott under way

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spaghetti, macaroni, chicken and seafood topped the Sunday dinner menus for thousands of Americans on the opening day of a week-long meat boycott protesting high prices.

Most meat markets were closed on Sunday, so it was hard to judge whether housewives were crossing beef, lamb and pork off their shopping lists.

President Nixon announced last Thursday night that a ceiling on the price of all beef, pork, and lamb was to go into effect today. But leaders of consumer groups said the boycott would be held anyway because the ceiling would not be effective.

Although some New York restaurants reported patrons asking for more meatless dishes than usual, a spot check of restaurants in the Chicago area showed most restaurants doing a booming business.

"Right now we've got a waiting line of 20 minutes, and I've seen a lot of steaks going by," said Frieda Marianos, service manager at a Chicago restaurant where the best steak costs $7.50.

"We've been selling chicken, that's all," said Cheri Killingsworth, a meat clerk at a Detroit food store. An assistant manager at another chain store agreed that it was "really bad."

Joining the ranks of meat boycotters in Michigan was the Rainbow People's party, formerly known as the White Panther party. A party spokesman explained, "Meat prices are criminal, and we're in favor of all political action like this."

Dolly Cole, wife of the president of General Motors, said her family wasn't boycotting meat. She added, "But I really don't think we have steak more than once every two weeks or so."

Mrs. Cole said she cut up a leftover rump roast to make hash for Sunday dinner. She said, "We like hash."

In Waterville, Maine, Pat Gorman served her family of nine a macaroni loaf made with cheese, macaroni, tuna fish, evaporated milk, onions, eggs and pimentoes. Mrs. Gorman, who helped organize the Maine boycott, said, "My husband likes spicier foods, but the kids loved it."

She said that she has received about 200 telephone calls from women throughout the state who wanted to organize a meatless protest in their areas.

A housewife passing out meatless recipes at a Columbia, Mo., food store Saturday was upstaged by a group of 16 cattlemen who bought the store out of meat and then gave it away to surprised customers.

"We wanted people to see what it would be like to go into a store and not be able to buy meat because it wasn't there," said Jim Marshall, a spokesman for the cattlemen.

Mrs. Marilyn Johnson, the housewife, said shoppers were taking her recipes for salmon souffle, chopstick tuna, rosy cheese fondue and other meatless dishes until the ranchers started handing out free meat.

"I kept telling the customers that free meat is nice, but that it won't be free next week," she said.

CAMPAIGN CHALLENGE — The city clean-up campaign is now in its second stage, according to City Manager Dan Wolford. The voluntary stage of the campaign ended Saturday, and now personal contacts are being made by the building inspector and policemen where violators exist. Violators of the city refuse ordinance who did not clean up their properties during the voluntary stage of the campaign are now being asked personally to correct the situation. Persons who ignore the requests will be subject to prosecution, according to Wolford. The Delaware Street property shown here is littered with wood, tin cans, lawnmowers, chairs, a toaster and various other items, and is one of the targets of the campaign to create an "atmosphere for progress." The News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let stand a lower court decision blocking construction of the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

The high court refused without comment or dissent an urgent government plea to overturn the lower court. Thus, the justices left the future of the pipeline from Alaska's North Slope up to Congress.

WOUNDED KNEE, S.D. (AP) — Provisional agreement that could lead to the end of the 34-day occupation of Wounded Knee has been reached by the federal government and activist Indians.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Gen. Kent Frizzell, the government's chief negotiator, told a news conference Sunday that "a consensus" had been reached at that day's session on more than half of 10 Indian demands.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survivor of North Vietnamese captivity says he believes more than 100 U.S. airmen were killed by angry militiamen and civilians after their planes were shot down.

"Well over 100 men were seen on the ground alive but never reached the prison system," Air Force Col. James H. Kasler said in an interview.

"We know that in the bombed areas an awful lot of men were killed by the militia. The North Vietnamese civilians were pretty irate."

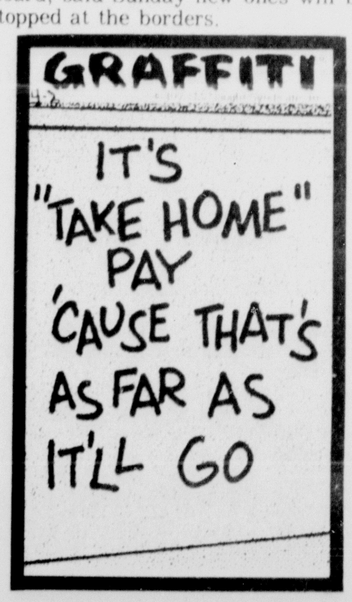
STOCKHOLM (AP) — With the withdrawal of American combat troops from Vietnam, the Swedish government says it will no longer automatically grant asylum to U.S. military deserters. But it will continue to protect those already in the country.

There are some 450 American deserters and draft dodgers currently in Sweden. Kjell Oeberg, general director of the Swedish Immigration Board, said Sunday new ones will be stopped at the borders.



Many Ohioans join meat boycott

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The meat boycott is on nationwide and food store operators in Ohio are standing back, waiting to see what happens as family shoppers choose menus from non-meat sources.

The boycott is being used in an attempt to force meat prices down, but store managers for the most part in Ohio say they'll be going ahead with regular meat advertising.

Jim Flay, manager of Liberal Food Market in the Cincinnati suburb of Price Hill said he would be monitoring meat sales.

"I'm concerned about it, let's put it like that," said Ed Burns, Columbus area food chain manager.

Leaders of the boycott said they would continue to select poultry and fish over meat despite President Nixon's price ceiling on beef, pork and lamb, imposed last week.

Mrs. Cynthia Parker, a member of a Columbus "Fight Inflation Together" group said she planned to serve "a lot of fish and processed meats" to her family this week.

"I think 99 per cent of the women are supporting the boycott either actively or in their own homes," she said. She also said the Columbus group plans to hold an "After the Boycott" meeting April 10 to give housewives a chance to meet with farmers, meat packers and retailers to discuss the effects of the boycott.

Mrs. Dreama Thomas of Grove City said she did not buy any fresh meat for her four-member family when she did her shopping for this week. And she said she spent only $37 on food, compared with the $60 spent the previous week.

In Dayton, two housewives in FOOD (Families to Overcome Outrageous Demands) said they would be distributing leaflets at local food stores urging shoppers to buy meat substitutes.

The president of the Columbus Building Trades Council, John Scales, said his members support the boycott, which he said was aimed at large corporations that are "much more able to maintain price controls in food than the little farmer, who historically has been in a poor position in American society in purchasing power."

"We are not," he contended, "chastising the farmer."

Food prices high in foreign nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sirloin steak out of sight these days? It's rough all over, according to U.S. emissaries who checked supermarket prices in Bonn, London, Tokyo, Rome and other foreign capitals.

Beef roasts sold for $2.08 per pound in the West German capital in mid-March, about the same as in Washington.

And if misery truly loves company Japan's finest—Kobe beef—was selling to a limited clientele in Tokyo for $17.40 per pound.

The foreign meat prices were reported today by the Agriculture Department in its weekly publication, "Foreign Agriculture." Officials said spot checks were made of prices in 11 cities by U.S. agricultural attaches.

T-bone steak was reported at 85 cents per pound in Brasilia and veal cutlets at 67 cents. In Washington, the report said, sirloin was $1.69 and veal $2.29.

Parisian shoppers saw top round of beef at $2.57 per pound and veal escalope at $3.20, the report said. In Stockholm, porterhouse steak was $3.81 per pound and veal cutlets $2.82.

Sirloin in London stores was $1.88 per pound, with rump steak going for $2.25 to disgruntled housewives where rising food prices have fed labor-union strife.

Bacon, currently about $1.19 per pound here, was bringing 96 cents in Brussels. Pork loin in Washington was $1.29 and in Tokyo it was $2.25.

Brazil had the lowest price for lamb chops, 58 cents per pound, compared with $2.19 here, $2 in Rome, $2.49 in Brussels, and $1.98 in Stockholm.

Poultry as an alternative? Broiler chicken, at 65 cents a pound in Washington, was priced at $1.67 in Tokyo; 48 cents in The Hague; $1 in Stockholm; 63 to 71 cents in Rome; 64 cents in Ottawa, where Canadians also paid $1.68 for sirloin steak, $1.32 for pork loin, and 99 cents for imported leg of lamb; and 62 cents in Bonn.

Nixon meets with Thieu

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon is expected to assure South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu of continued American aid when the two meet today at the Western White House.

Although U.S. officials often have briefed newsmen prior to such conferences, White House sources were reluctant to discuss topics for the meetings before Thieu's arrival.

However, observers expect discussion of Nixon's repeated warnings that Communist violations of the cease-fire agreement could produce American military reprisals.

After arriving in a chartered Air Vietnam jetliner at Los Angeles International Airport on Sunday, Thieu's only comment to newsmen was: "I came to say thanks to the American people."

A communique is to be issued after the last of their four meetings on Tuesday, and few observers expect it to contain any substantive surprises. They think it will have pledges of solidarity, promises of U.S. aid to South Vietnam, vows of adherence to the cease-fire agreement and a statement that North Vietnam and the Viet Cong are expected to do the same.

Meat boycott has little effect here

A spot check with managers of local food markets Monday morning disclosed little in the way of the effect of a meat boycott in Washington C. H.

Most managers felt it was too early to tell if the boycott would reduce their meat sales. Some said they thought the boycott would not seriously affect stores in this area.

Developer may double space

Washington Square expansion planned

The developer of the Washington Square Shopping Center said Monday that he expects to "at least double" the size of the complex at Columbus Avenue and Elm Street within the next nine months to a year.

William H. Hadler, Columbus real estate executive, disclosed that plans call for a new wing which should increase floor space "probably by more than 100 per cent". Hadler said he has been negotiating with a number of prospective tenants but that it is too early to make a formal announcement.

The Shopping Center's 16th tenant, a Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. service store, is expected to open for business within the next four months. Footers have been poured for the 6,000-square-foot brick structure on the front of the Shopping Center property facing the CCC Highway. The Rathburn Construction Co., of Shadyside, holds the contract for the four-bay center.

"We feel that this new business will complement the present center", Hadler said.

As he followed along in the crowd, I got the escort officer's attention, I pointed to the man and demonstrated my intention and ability to deliver the one-two punch if he came out again.

This was sort of a moment of truth for the officer. He visibly paled, then made his decision.

The officer ran over to the man who was still trailing me, grabbed him by the shirt, shook him hard several times, shouted at him and I think he slapped him in the face. The man didn't give us any more trouble after that.

The crowd overflowed into the street more and more until we had a path no wider than a pair of streetcar tracks. People were able to pummel us. The cameras had long ago disappeared.

We made a left turn to the soccer stadium. The path was a 45-degree turn where the crowd was solidly massed.

I could see one or two pairs of prisoners fighting their way through, sometimes crawling, often kicking and punching.

At this point in that parade I did feel fear. I thought we might be mashed.

It was like fighting for 15 yards in a football game with no rules. We were fighting the enraged people, and the thing was now out of hand. Bob and I finally got to the stadium.

Once inside, with no crowd left, the army men seemed even more relieved than we were. They jabbered and smiled among themselves while we seized the chance to talk among ourselves.

On the way back in the truck, I was talking to Bobby Risner and I missed a danger signal, a cough. A guard knocked me not unconscious but momentarily senseless.

Back in my cell at the Zoo, I thought the eventful evening was over but suddenly an officer came to my door and told me in a kindly way that I'd better drink some water. I did and a guard took me out to a tree, blindfolded me and gagged me with two rags that had been used to bind my sandals. The rags were filthy and full of grit.

He then cuffed my hands behind me and around the tree. I thought I was one of three persons bound to trees.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Cloudy skies and scattered showers will persist throughout Ohio today, the National Weather Service reported.

Showers were expected to continue over northern counties tonight and Tuesday, with cloudiness breaking up elsewhere in the state.

A low pressure trough stretching from southern Lake Michigan to central New York was forecast to bring cooler air into Indiana and Ohio.

Some precipitation was recorded Sunday evening, including .41 inches at Youngstown and a little over one-tenth of an inch at Findlay. Other cities recorded lesser amounts.

Mainly About People

Area students enrolled at Bowling Green State University named to the dean's scholastic honors list for the winter quarter are Denise Kay Bowshier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bowshier, of Mount Sterling; Cynthia Elizabeth Carty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy H. Carty, of London, and Gary Lee Bailey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Bailey, of Leesburg.

All made an average of 4.00. Bailey is a junior and both girls are seniors at the university.

Stock list down again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued today the selling pattern it followed last Friday, and analysts attributed the decline to the same, old factors: concern over inflation and rising interest rates.

At noon the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had dropped 4.44 points to 946.57. Declines held almost a 7 to 4 lead over advances in lackluster trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The broad-based NYSE index of some 1,400 common stocks was down .32 to 59.26 at noon.

The American Stock Exchange was lower, too, with the price-change index off .02 to 24.39 at midday.

Eldon A. Grimm of Walston & Co. said the Supreme Court's refusal today to overturn a lower court construction ban on the trans-Alaska pipeline "certainly didn't help" the market.

ITT chairman testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — ITT board chairman Harold S. Geneen testifies today before a Senate subcommittee trying to find out why the company attempted to channel $1 million through the U.S. government into Chile in 1970.

The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multi-national corporations has received conflicting accounts about the purpose of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. offer during the campaign of Childean President Salvador Allende.

John A. McCone, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency and now an ITT director, testified March 21 that Geneen sent him to Washington in September 1970 to inform high government officials that ITT was ready to contribute up to $1 million "in support of any government plan for the purpose of bringing about a coalition of opposition to Allende."

Final American POW suffering from malaria

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the Philippines, the last known American prisoner of war was suffering from a slight case of malaria today that may delay his return home to home soil by a day.

In California, a recently freed POW, Air Force Lt. Col. Louis H. Bernasconi, gathered his mother and 14-year-old daughter into his arms and wept for joy Sunday as the crowd cheered thunderously and sang "God Bless America."

In Massachusetts, freed POW Air Force Maj. Fernando Alexander told a welcoming crowd: "We traveled almost halfway around the world today. Thank God it was all the way home."

In Texas, ex-POW Capt. William A. Spencer arriving home said: "It's nice to be in the land of the Stars and Stripes and Playboy magazine and those kinds of things."

Army Capt. Robert T. White, the last American to be released by the Communists, was limping when he arrived Sunday at Clark Air Base in the Philippines for processing. He was liberated by the Viet Cong in the Mekong Delta, where his light observation plane had been shot down.

Doctors at Clark today described his condition after his first sleep in freedom since 1969 as satisfactory, but said he was being treated for a slight case of malaria.

The 32-year-old Newport News, Va., pilot had been expected to fly home Wednesday for a reunion with his wife, Judith, but doctors said his return home might be delayed until Thursday.

Four C141 StarLifter hospital jets left Clark Sunday for the United States. Fifteen Americans and a Canadian missionary were taken to Travis Air Force Base, Calif.; 16 POWs went to Andrews AFB, Md.; 17 were taken to Sheppard AFB, Tex.; and one plane carrying 20 left some at March AFB, Calif., and some at Scott AFB, Ill.

Clues are sought in Cincinnati to blast fatal to 7; 15 hurt

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Arson investigators today sifted through the debris of an explosion that killed seven and injured 15 Saturday night.

Asst. Fire Chief Robert Schinaman said Sunday night that the debris was being moved to a vacant lot for examination.

Officials said they hoped to learn what caused the gas leak that apparently triggered the blast.

Two crane shovels were removing the debris from three buildings and loading it into city trucks for the transfer. Workmen were also seeking a possible eighth body.

Five of the victims were believed to have been in a rear room at Clara and Al's Cafe at the time of the blast.

Mary Goode, who lived on the first floor, was on the telephone to the Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co. to report the smell of natural gas at the time of the explosion.

Her husband, Jesse, who accompanied her to the tavern telephone, was killed when he stepped into the kitchen.

Bartender John W. Johnson, 42, and his friends, William Pagano, 71; Lawrence Stewart, 40; Francis Puckett, and Jack Froman, 39, also died in the blast.

Also killed was Pearl Martin, 72, who, according to Mrs. Goode, was a bedridden invalid.

"I don't know whether I was still holding the telephone or not," said Mrs. Goode, describing her rescue by firemen. They found her protected by floor joists in the basement.

She said she and her husband moved into the building four months ago and didn't know many of the people. Jesse worked as a presser for a dry cleaning company.

Mrs. Goode said both were asleep but were awakened by the smell of gas. He checked out their apartment and found nothing, so they went into the bar to report it.

"I called CG&E," she said, "and I told the woman and she transferred me to somebody else. Just after I finished talking...it happened."

She said she remembers nothing from then until she was found. "I didn't hear anything but me yelling," she recalled. She spent Sunday in a nearby motel.

Returnee lashes protesters for keeping Viet War going

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — Army S. Sgt. William S. Baird, who spent almost five years as a prisoner-of-war in North Vietnam, says antiwar demonstrations kept POWS from returning home sooner.

Baird, 23, said Saturday that if antiwar protestors " hadn't raised so much hell and made so many demonstrations, we'd have been home earlier."

"I think the Vietnam War was justified," said Baird. "We were sent there to do a job and did it. If I had to do it again, I would."

Baird, who is partially paralyzed in his lower legs and has internal injuries, returned home Saturday for a welcoming parade. He is on 10 days leave from Valley Forge General Hospital in Phoenixville, Pa.

Baird said his injuries stemmed from gunshot wounds inflicted at the time of his capture. He said the injuries robbed him of bladder and bowel control.

Army Spec. 5 Steve Sutton, who drove Baird home, refused to let the Wooster native answer questions related to prisoner torture, amnesty and U.S. aid to North Vietnam.

However, Baird did tell reporters that he was "shot when I was captured and ... handcuffed to a bed for four or five days."

"They thought I wasn't telling the truth," said Baird, "and they pointed a pistol at me several times because I refused to listen to propaganda and I refused to get off my bed.

"I received very little medical treatment from the Communists," said Baird. "They saved my life, but what little they did was very poor."

Baird was released March 5, after 4 years and 10 months as a prisoner.

He said the POWs heard "anything that had to do with people against the war."

"We heard the Communist side of it. I did not believe it, but there was nothing else to read," Baird said.

Baird said nearly all the prisoners with him "were originally listed as missing in action."

"But I don't think there are any more there," he said "I think everyone's out now."

Opposition to North Viet aid growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed U.S. aid to North Vietnam is being attacked anew as returned prisoners of war tell stories of torture and mistreatment at the hands of their captors.

The stories "convince me that not a cent of American aid money should be spent on rehabilitating a country that is apparently run by savages," said Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, R-Va.

He and Conservative Sen. James L. Buckley of New York issued statements Sunday about President Nixon's plans to ask Congress for aid to North Vietnam as "an investment in peace."

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield also referred to the accounts by the former prisoners in saying that he had not changed his mind that the aid to Hanoi would help keep the peace.

"Even before this it looked difficult," the Montana Democrat said. He said he did not know what effect the stories will have on Congress.

Buckley issued a statement urging President Nixon to "carefully reconsider any proposal for economic assistance to North Vietnam in light of the POW reports on treatment and prison conditions."

Boycott of meat taken seriously

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Police in Lorain said they're looking for a man they believe has carried the meat price protest a bit too far.

Police said the manager of a local Ponderosa Steak House reported receiving several calls from a man who threatened to kill all the restaurant's employes because they were not observing the national meat boycott.

Probe explosion at night spot; thought dynamite

Police speculated the explosion, which caused an estimated $2,000 to the inside of the building alone, might have been caused by sticks of dynamite thrown from a passing car.

Police Chief Wayne Constant said it might be a "wild guess," but said it appeared that "someone who just passed by" had thrown one or two sticks of dynamite onto the roof.

No injuries were reported. The one-story brick night spot was unoccupied at the time of the blast.

Good news on seals, whales

The news on a recent day included two items of heartening import to conservationists. Both originated from Washington. The National Marine Fisheries Service report the highest count of gray whales off the California coast since it began the count six years ago.

An agreement with Canada, Japan and the Soviet Union to suspend the harvesting of fur seals on St. George Island in the Pribilof group off Alaska was announced by the Department of Commerce.

Both the seals and whales are species which have occasioned particular concern. The gray whale is listed by the government as an endangered species. The fur seal is of interest to both conservationists and persons disturbed by the club-and-knife slaughtering method commonly used.

It is good to learn, thus, that this winter's gray whale count was more than 400 above that in 1971-72 , and almost 200 higher than the number recorded in the 1967-68 count. Though weather, viewing conditions and other factors have a bearing on this, the latest total does fairly indicate that the gray whale is at least holding its own.

As for the seals, experts are worried because they find that in the past three years there have been "unexplained downward trends in the male population despite careful management . . ." The long-run in this, were the trend to continue, is evident.

To learn more about the causes of this decline, scientists will compare the seal population on St. George Island with that on nearby St. Paul Island where the taking of fur seals will be permitted to continue.

This will naturally not satisfy those who favor an absolute ban on the taking of seals for their fur. The international agreement and related study of the seal population is a noteworthy start, however, on more judicious management of a valued animal species.

Watergate: an idiotic episode

The more we learn about the Watergate affair, the more puzzled we become. By "we" I mean those of us who have spent a good deal of time inside Presidential politics.

Putting aside the interesting conflict between the Administration's devotion to law and order (to say nothing of the "work ethic") and the sequence of events which has led the Acting Director of the F.B.I. to accuse the President's counsel of lying to an agent, what kind of characters would have authorized and lavishly financed that idiotic episode?

The answer that immediately comes to mind is that the Watergate break-in and bugging could only have been sponsored by men who knew less about national politics than I do about astrophysics.

Indeed, were it not for the intrinsic seriousness of actions which undermine the credibility of our political system, the Watergate caper resembled a fraternity prank. It was simply asinine both in conception and execution.

FOR THIS REASON I have been convinced from the outset that President Nixon was totally unaware of the scenario. Richard Nixon did not become representative, senator, vice president, and finally President of the United States through his non-political talents. I think, perhaps naively, and he, and every other candidate for President of the United States in my time, would have blocked it instantly on moral grounds.

But beyond that, he would be fully aware of the inherent stupidity of even a successful bugging of the office of Lawrence O'Brien, then the Democratic national chairman.

O'Brien grew up in what might be called the "original sin" school of politics — Joseph P. Kennedy Sr., dean; Kenneth O'Donnell, student advisor. The first rule one learned in this school was always to assume the worst case: for instance, take for granted the existence of opposition spies in your midst, figure that somebody has bugged the headquarters, and that the phones are tapped. (Not by the FBI, the C.I.A., or any official agency, but by private electronic experts.)

As a consequence of this, any real political business was invariable conducted well outside the office. One would call O'Brien about some ticklish political matter and simply say, "Larry, I think we ought to have a talk. Why don't I drop by in half an hour?"

Arriving at his office in the Watergate, you would remark on what a lovely day it was and suggest a walk. And as you ambled along the bank of the Potomac, you would get down to business.

I AM SURE that the Republicans, that is, the real professionals, operate on roughly the same set of assumptions. This sort of atmosphere does have a "chilling effect," but one adapts to it quickly. It is not really comparable to the environment of a "police state"; anybody with some knowledge of electronics and $25 can get in the bugging business, and the police are, in my judgment, minimal offenders.

The Watergate operation was, in other words, a political Amateur Hour. And the reason it obviously received support from White House personnel is that the Nixon White House is staffed with political amateurs.

Nobody in Mr. Nixon's top echelon has ever been elected tree warden (an office on our Massachusetts ballot last month) and they look like the boys from Delta Sigma Chi.

But Watergate was not a fraternity prank. One cannot with impunity tamper with the electoral process, and any efforts by the White House to cover up staff involvement must be ruthlessly disposed of.

The doctrine of Executive Privilege may frustrate a congressional committee, but it cuts no ice with a grand jury.

Bribe to Hanoi needn't be blackmail

Frankly, the only reason to give the North Vietnamese a nickel would be to bribe them to keep the peace. This is an admittedly ignoble reason, but it appeals to the practical streak in many Americans who have no love for Communists of any stripe.

There is Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, for example. Strom, who is as much of an anti-Communist hardliner as any man in the Senate, says he is "essentially opposed to giving aid to North Vietnam." But he adds that "we must keep an open mind on the subject, based on practical considerations and the necessary safeguards." The "practical considerations" are that Hanoi, once it gets the money, will stay bribed and will not spend the funds on rebuilding its warmaking machinery.

Although I hate to say it, I find myself going along with Thurmond's rather schizoid position. The North Vietnamese don't deserve a cent; indeed, they ought to be compelled to give reparations to the South Vietnamese, the Loatians, and the Cambodians. But if a bribe will work, lives will be spared.

SOME of my good friends in the American Conservative Union say they are "unalterably opposed to aid to North Vietnam." And they quote House Minority Leader Gerald Ford's 1965 statement that "friendship, security and solid international relations cannot be bought with dollars." M. Stanton Evans, the ACU chairman, in supporting the position of his organization, recalls the experience the ancient Saxons had when they raised the famous Danegeld tax to buy off the Danish despoilers of Britain's North Sea coast. The Danes took the money, but it didn't stop them from renewing the raids. It was Rudyard Kipling who wrote that "once you have paid him the Dane-Geld you never get rid of the Dane."

The Kipling line applies to almost all blackmail situations. But, like Sen. Thurmond, I question the completeness of any anaolgy that would cast the North Vietnamese as modern collectors of a Danegeld. The Danes came back to ravish the British coast for the good and sufficient reason that the Saxons lacked the physical power to stop them. A "Dangegeld" apid to Hanoi, however, would be designed to give the South Vietnamese, not involved in the bribe, time to strengthen their defenses, to learn how to operate a modern air force, and to contain any North Vietnamese encamped south of the demilitarized zone.

The bribe would be in the nature of a holding operation. If it didn't work, there would be nothing to keep the Nixon Administration from denouncing Hanoi and mining anew the port of Haiphong. If the ancient Saxons had had the equivalent of the B-52s, their Danegeld tax might have been a one-shot affair. It would have deprived Rudyard Kipling of a brave and ringing poetic line, but, given the requisite will on the part of the Saxons, it would have stopped raids on the North Sea shores.

WHEN I SAY I am for offering Hanoi the bribe to keep the peace, I do so under one condition: I would, at the moment the money is delivered, give the Saigon government some bombing planes with sufficient range to reach the North Vietnamese dikes in the Red River delta. It would be thoroughly understood that if the North Vietnamese used the money to rebuild their war machine and started moving men and equipment over the Ho Chi Minh trail into South Vietnam, we would look the other way while Saigon drowned Hanoi's aagricultural economy. With the South Vietnamese in a good position to stop the North Vietnamese Gen. Giap by inundating his rear, the Danegeld analogy would break down completely.

All of this talk about bribing Hanoi to keep the peace will probably come to naught anyway. The North Vietnamese obviously do not intend to withdraw from Laos and Cambodia, and they will almost certainly continue to wage some form of warfare in the sections of South Vietnam they now occupy. With the war continuing, it is hardly likely that Hanoi will get a penny out of the U.S. Senate, and Sen. Thurmond won't have to worry about the morality of his split position.

Letters To The Editor

EDITOR, RECORD-HERALD:

Last Tuesday we the undersigned individuals, together with the Rev. Elmer Burrall, attended another in a series of meetings with the Mid Ohio Regional Planning Commission.

We are talking about a Central Ohio Planning Area, created by executive order of Gov. Gilligan, involving Franklin County, the six counties adjoining Frankling, and Fayette — eight counties total.

This is a planning agency for these eight counties. The scope of their thinking is indicated when we examine the suggested areas of planning which have been mentioned in literature disseminated by the MORPC itself. These areas are: Highway Systems, air and rail facilities, mass transportation, water resource development, sanitary sewage systems, solid waste disposal, air quality, environmental quality, parts and recreational facilities, major open space, agriculture, minerals and quarries, market analysis, development of housing standards, strategy for supplying regional housing needs, law enforcement, fire protection, civil defense, disaster prevention, economic and job development policies, clearinghouse for job and development data, impact of job development activities, calalyst for public and private agencies, technical assistance, formulate and coordinate programs for human resource development, social service programs in the region, public education, private and parochial, higher education, technical and vocational.

It was suggested the functional areas of concern of the MORPC include, but not be limited to the above-mentioned areas.

The time has come, in the thinking of this planning agency that a number of basic matters must be considered. Those discussed and acted upon last Tuesday were (1) Approval of a letter to Gov. Gilligan requesting him to implement this planning group into a legal entity by executive order, (2) discussion and inclusion in the minutes of the study group four suggested formulas for distribution of the voting strength among the eight counties.

In connection with the legalizing of the planning group it was suggested that enabling legislation would be in order, thus bringing the state legislature into the act.

In regard to the four suggested formulas for distribution of voting strength among the eight counties let us briefly add this further explanation. Three of the formulas would provide Franklin with sufficient voting strength (about 48 per cent) which, with the aid of only one other county, would enable them to control all the action of the planning group. Under these three plans Fayette would be granted about 6 per cent of the voting strength. The fourth formula would provide Franklin with sufficient voting strength, which with the aid of two additional counties, would enable them to control the action of the planning group. The Fayette County representatives suggested another alternative but were ignored.

Regarding finances no official action was taken but literature was distributed which suggested this matter could be handled by a per capita assessment on the population of the planning area on a county by county basis.

No figure was mentioned but it was suggested this would depend on the size of the staff involved.

"STEAK KNIFE! WHAT FOR?"

Hal Boyle Wrinkles on top of wrinkles?

NEW YORK (AP) — Your wrinkles are getting wrinkles if —

You can still remember the first names of the Rover Boys and the Bobbsey twins.

Anything unusual that happens reminds you of something like it but even more unusual that happened 25 years ago.

You wonder why younger men at the office waste time staring at themselves in the washroom mirror when they comb their hair. When you look in the mirror, you don't see anything worth a second glance.

Even before taking your blood pressure your doctor can predict it within three points.

The insurance company writes you a letter and tells you that your policy is paid up at last.

Now and then you get so mad at things in general that you sit down and write a long letter to your congressman asking him what the hell does the government think it is doing anyway.

You think people are crazy who read articles in the newspapers and magazines telling how to beat inflation. You know there is no way on earth this can be done.

It comes as something of a minor shock to you to realize that by now you are probably too old to inherit money from anybody.

Your son is beginning to show a little gray in his sideburns.

If it weren't so much trouble, you wouldn't mind having a couple more grandchildren.

Occasionally your wife says something that is worth listening to because it makes real sense. You wonder how the old girl got so smart all at once.

Half the time when you're girl-watching you're thinking of something else.

You talk more about the weather than you do about sex — because, after all, it is really more interesting. For one thing, it changes pretty often.

When you occasionally review your life, you are pleasantly surprised at the number of people you have outlived.

Your job is no longer so much of a challenge and an adventure as it is a sanctuary and a refuge.

Reading a column such as this makes you feel so old you look in the mirror to see if your wrinkles actually are getting wrinkles.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Yes, a person does have right to die with dignity

DEAR ABBY: I hear they are trying to pass a law making it legal to let people die just by discontinuing treatment. They say it will be used so old people who are incurably sick won't have to linger and suffer after all hope for recovery is gone.

The thought of this is frightening. WHO will decide who is old enough and sick enough?

If you know anything about "euthanasia" which in plain English means "mercy killing" please state your views.

CONCERNED IN MIAMI

DEAR CONCERNED: "Euthanasia" literally means "the good death," and I am all for it. I believe it is cruel and senseless to prolong life by artificial means when there is no hope for recovery.

The right to die with dignity should be everybody's right. The Euthanasia Education Council (whose meetings I have personally attended) in New York, has made available "A Living Will." It reads as follows:

"To My Family, My Physician, My Clergyman, My Lawyer: If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stands as the testament of my wishes:

"If there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental or spiritual disability, I (name) request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or heroic measures. Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity and old age—it is the one certainty. I do not fear death as much as I fear the indignity or deterioration, dependence, and hopeless pain. I ask that drugs be mercifully administered to me for terminal suffering even if they hasten the moment of death.

"This request is made while I am in good health and spirits. Although this document is not legally binding, you who care for me will, I hope, feel morally bound to follow its mandates. I recognize it places a heavy burden on responsibility upon you, and it is with the intention of sharing that responsibility and of mitigating any feelings of guilt that this statement is made."

Sign document in the presence of witnesses, and give it to your family physician, attorney, and-or a member of your family. (Better yet, obtain three copies, and give each one a copy. I did.)

"A Living Will" document may be obtained by writing to: THE EUTHANASIA COUNCIL 250 W. 57th St. New York, N. Y 10019

The document is free, but since this is a nonprofit organization, donations from $1 and up are gratefully accepted. One woman sent $500 saying: "This is the most marvelous thing I've ever heard of!" I agree.

DEAR ABBY: Cigaret smoke makes me sick. Yet if someone asks, "Do you mind if I smoke?" I find myself saying, "Not at all. Go ahead." Then I could kick myself. There must be a better way to handle this.

NO GUTS

DEAR NO GUTS: There is. The next time someone asks: Do you mind if I smoke?" reply: "Not if you don't mind if I choke!"

DEAR ABBY: Randy and I both attended the University of Oregon and plan to be married sometime this summer. Randy has been writing our marriage service and he has one part in there I am not so sure of. He wants me to say, "I (my name) promise to love, cherish, and live in Oregon with (his name) in sickness and in health, poverty and wealth, etc."

I love Oregon, too, Abby, and I'm afraid if he includes that in the marriage service, people will laugh, and I don't want anybody laughing during the marriage vows.

Should we leave it in?

ELSIE IN EUGENE

DEAR ELSIE: Tell Randy that living in Oregon is a privilege—not a duty, and to leave it out!

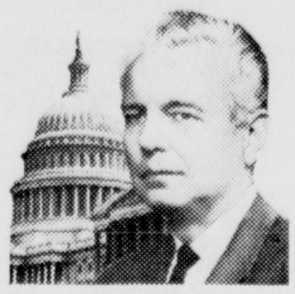
WASHINGTON REPORT

From

WILLIAM H. HARSHA

Representative To Congress
6th District, Ohio



WASHINGTON — Recently, the details of the Administration's special revenue sharing proposals for elementary education were revealed to the House Education and Labor Committee.

The legislation received a rather cool reception — to say the least — from both Republicans and Democrats alike on the committee. It is very unlikely, therefore, that the committee would report these proposals favorably to the House for passage.

On the other hand, it is also unlikely that the Administration would be very willing to consider extending the present educational aid programs if the revenue sharing proposals are not passed or until a compromise agreement can be reached.

THIS DEADLOCK is a very serious matter and poses a very real dilemma for the 19,000 public school districts in America. Current federal programs for aid to education will expire at the end of this fiscal year (that is, on June 30).

Unless some sort of legislation is agreed upon, these districts could face the prospect of beginning the new school year in the fall without federal aid.

Consequently, I do believe that — in the event of a stalemate — some sort of continuing resolution would be enacted to prevent this.

The $2.7 billion Administration proposal would convert the 30 categorical grant-in-aid programs into five block grants to assist: disadvantaged children; the handicapped; vocational training; federal employee impact areas; and support services such as textbook purchases and school lunch programs.

Two programs — library services and strengthening state departments of education — would be eliminated.

OF THESE, the proposal to alter the formula payment of money to states for improving the education of low income or disadvantaged children has attracted the most controversy.

First, it would supplant the popular Title I program now funded through the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. For fiscal '74, states would receive at least 100 per cent of the amount they received last year, but in the following years, the states which now spend more than the national average per child from their local and state funds would lose money.

HEW statistics indicate that under this formula, Ohio would get more money for the education of disadvantaged, going from $46.5 million in fiscal 73 to $49.9 million in fiscal '75.

AFTER the state allotment has been determined, the money would be distributed in such a way that areas with a high concentration of disadvantaged students — with the highest poverty ranking — would receive funds first.

In addition, no school district receiving less than $10,000 in federal aid would receive an allocation, and the whole proposal would eliminate approximately one million students from the 6.1 million disadvantaged now served under Title I.

The "strings" attached to this provision would also require that 75 per cent of the money allocated for disadvantaged students must be spent on reading and mathematics.

Of the other categories, I am particularly concerned that the quality of vocational education, education of the handicapped and special services is not diminished by special revenue sharing changes. All three would be combined into one allocation for each state. While 43 per cent of the total allocation would be for vocational education, and 16 per cent would go to the handicapped, up to 30 per cent of these amounts could be switched to any other category except impact aid.

I would have to be assured that the Sixth District of Ohio schools — where the vocational money is particularly needed — would not get lost in the shuffle for these funds.

There is very little question but that these revenue sharing proposals face an uphill battle in the Congress and that time is running out for the current programs.

Whatever the shortcomings of the latter, however, I do not believe the existing laws should be allowed to expire if the differences cannot be resolved, for the losers in the battle would be neither the Congress nor the Administration, but the school children of America.

Ohio Perspective

Legislators seek action on Lake Erie erosion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Several legislators from northern Ohio — aroused by the marauding waves and winds off Lake Erie— are pushing the state action to fight shore erosion this year.

In a series of bills and resolutions, they propose a variety of solutions ranging from state acquisition of lands already damaged to making property owners eligible for federal flood insurance.

Strict zoning regulations with criminal penalties also are being proposed to assure proper land management and conservation.

Hearings could last throughout much of the 1973 legislative session, sponsors said.

Rep. James Mueller, D-74 Chesterland, sponsored two of the measures along with a broader proposal which would seek to protect flood plains throughout the state based on flood patterns in Ohio in the past 100 years.

Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-54 Oberlin, has introduced a broad proposal to protect flood plains along Lake Erie and to make property owners eligible for federal flood insurance.

Freshman Rep. John T. McCormack, D-18 Euclid, presented a House resolution in which Ohio would ask President Nixon to enter into negotiations with Canada for joint efforts to clean up and protect the lake.

One of Mueller's bills would create a "Lake Erie Erosion Fund" and allow the state to acquire erosion-damaged land for recreational purposes. The state would pay a price equal to the market value of the land before it was damaged. The state would be authorized to develop the land itself or lease it for recreational purposes.

The measure would appropriate $2 million to be used for that purpose in the 1973-1975 biennium starting July 1, 1973.

Mueller has another bill that would have the Department of Natural Resources make extensive surveys and develop "full and accurate maps" of all lands that have been damaged by erosion or inundation.

The Department thereafter would make recommendations as to land used to counties, townships, and municipalities for the adoption of zoning regulations.

Officials of the political subdivisions would be required to hold public hearings, giving owners of properties listed on the maps a minimum for four weeks' notice.

After regulations were adopted, violators could be subject to a charge of a first degree misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail, a $1,000 fine, or both.

Man gives up job to return to circus life

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP)—Nothing makes Ernie Schwerdtfeger happier than "to see a little kid laughing."

So the 47-year-old Schwerdtfeger is giving up his job as a display manager of a large Topeka, Kan. department store to return to the calliope and the nomadic, hurly-burly life of the circus.

Ernie Schwerdtfeger is a clown.

"Being a clown is something you just can't get away from," says Schwerdfeger, who began a career in show business at the age of 3. It gets in your blood."

Over the years, the veteran entertainer has performed during the circus season, as a song-and-dance man, as a clown and as an escape artist. He has also filled in as a catcher for aerialist acts.

In the off-seasons he has done display work for department stores across the nation and done sculpturing in papier mache and fiberglass.

Schwerdtfeger won't be going back to the circus alone. He's taking his wife, Mary Belle, four stepchildren, and 5-month-old son, who Schwedtfeger says he wants to become an aerialist— "he has the muscles for it."

Balloons move logs in Northwest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The best way to move big logs out of the woods is by balloon, says Faye H. Stewart of Eugene, Ore.

It's not only cheaper and faster but also ecologically much better, he feels.

Stewart, a lumber executive, uses balloons 110 feet tall and 108 feet in diameter and says he's been transporting huge logs commercially for 10 years.

"Three years ago it reached the point where it was economical," he said Friday between conferences with legislators and government officials.

"We fly logs, from the point at which the tree is felled, down the slopes to where trucks wait on roads, and they never touch the ground," he added. "We pick up from one to seven or eight logs on each turn."

"This method leaves the ground undisturbed—there's no siltation or erosion—and it cuts roadbuilding costs by more than half. We used to use helicopters for the same purpose, but this method is only 25 per cent as costly."

Stewart says his balloons hold 500,000 cubic feet of helium and have a lifting capacity of 24,000 pounds.

'Ladies Night' observed by Jud-I-Ques dancers

Jud-I-Ques square dance club observed 'ladies' night' with a Sadie Hawkins dance Saturday in Eastside School. Everyone was costumed as a "Dogpatch" character and since it was ladies' night, the ladies chose their partners for the first square dance. Robert Cotner was the narrator.

Three-legged race was won by Ed and Marilyn Knisley, and the strong arm contest by Mike Knapp.

The "Legend of Sadie Hawkins" was acted by Mrs. Cotner as "Sadie" and Ed Knisley as "Hekzibiah Hawkins."

The race to catch a husband for the re-hitched ceremonies was in charge of "Marryin' Sam" played by Chet Howell. The weddings were priced at 50 cents, $1 and $1.50. The $1.50 weddings were the those with flowers and veils. The vows were sealed with a kiss (using elbows only).

A "guzzlers contest" was held while square dancing. The prize for the biggest guzzler went to David Knisley.

Kris Smith won the hog calling contest and Richard Blessing the liar's contest. The kissing booth and wishing well were in charge of Mina Knisley as "Daisy Mae." Photography was by Mrs. Willard Judy.

Other games were conducted by "Ma Hawkins" and square dancing to the calling of Jim Lambert. Hillbilly "Some-more-gas-bord" was enjoyed with delic cies as cracklings, turnips, cornbread and apple butter, bologna, etc.

The Jud-I-Ques guests were members of their Sunday night class and others from Washington C. H. and Chillicothe representing the Crosstrailers Club, Belles and Beaus and the Buckeye Twisters.

'Drugs' WCTU topic

Washington C.H., Woman's Christian Temperance Union met in the home of Mrs. Homer Garringer Friday afternoon.

The meeting was opened with Scripture reading by Mrs. John Case. Miss Mabel Briggs read an article "Christ on the Cross".

Mrs. Cloyce Copley, who presided, read a letter from Mrs. Cullen Barth, state WCTU treasurer, expressing thanks for the contribution received in memory of Miss Ruby McBride. Mrs. Copley reported on a luncheon meeting which she, Mrs. Eldon Bethards and Mrs. Alice Bush attended in Hillsboro recently. The theme for discussion was "Share in Prayer Circles".

Mrs. Bethards read a letter saying the state president Mrs. Lucille Lafferty, and Mrs. Lois Bell were in an auto accident, and that both are confined to Marion Hospitals.

The mid-year state convention and workshop will be held April 3-4-5 in the Southern Hotel, Columbus. Mrs. B.E. Kelley was appointed devotional leaders for the rest of the year.

Miss Marian Christopher introduced Patrolman William Crooks who spoke on drugs, its effect on people. He said there are 40,000 drug addicts in Ohio and drug use has increased 200 per cent in the last 10 years. There are 400 deaths in Ohio a year due to drugs. Glue sniffers destroy the cells in the human brain and once destroyed they can never be replaced he said. Morphine and Codene are very dangerous and only about 5 per cent of heroin users can be cured he declared.

He said the habit starts at the Junior High level.

Following the meeting, Mrs. Garringer served a dessert course, assisted by Mrs. Williard Wilson and Mrs. Thomas Willis.

The next meeting, April 27, will be at the home of Miss Norma Dodd, with Mrs. Hugh Smith assisting. Mrs. Garringer will present the program.

Mrs. Shepard Homemakers hostess

Mrs. William Shepard was hostess to the Concord Homemakers Club for a carry-in luncheon and program. Miss Helen Perrill was the assisting hostess. Mrs. Jean Nisley gave the invocation.

Mrs. Shepard's dining room table was centered with a beautiful arrangements of hyacinths, daffodils and jonquils. Attractive blooming African violet plants decorated the small tables. Mrs. Nisley, president, conducted the meeting, when she stressed the vial requirement of the Red Cross for funds.

She recommended an interesting article in the Ohio Farmer magazine, "How A Child Learns About Money." The present officers will continue to serve to the next year: Mrs. Nisley, president; Mrs. Barney Morter, vice president; and Mrs. Harold Counts, secretary.

Members responded to roll call by expressing their ideas on the boycotting of meat.

U.S. air force "Fat Boy" Diet

Lose 20 Lbs. in 2 weeks!

That statement insults your intelligence. You didn't get fat overnight and you won't get slim overnight. Anybody that promises you otherwise is after your money. You want to lose weight not money. Right?

Thousands of men and women have lost weight with the "Fat Boy" diet. U.S. Air Force flight surgeons and dietitians recommend the "Fat Boy" diet. It is a no starvation diet an average person can easily follow at home, work, or while traveling. If fad diets were everything they claim (frankly they're not!), the Air Force would use them and not the "Fat Boy" diet. Common sense tells you the U.S. Air Force research facilities are superior to those of a mere fad diet promoter. Take advantage of their research — after all, your taxes paid for it.

"Fat Boy" diet money-back guarantees a loss of 5 lbs. per week. That is 20 lbs. in only 30 days — that's really a lot! Try lifting 20 lbs. sometime. If you are tired of carrying your extra weight, you owe it to yourself to try the "Fat Boy" diet.

Send only $2.00 ($2.25 for Rush Service) — cash is O.K. — to Raven International, P.O. Box 3773, Dept. FB, Santa Barbara, California 93105.

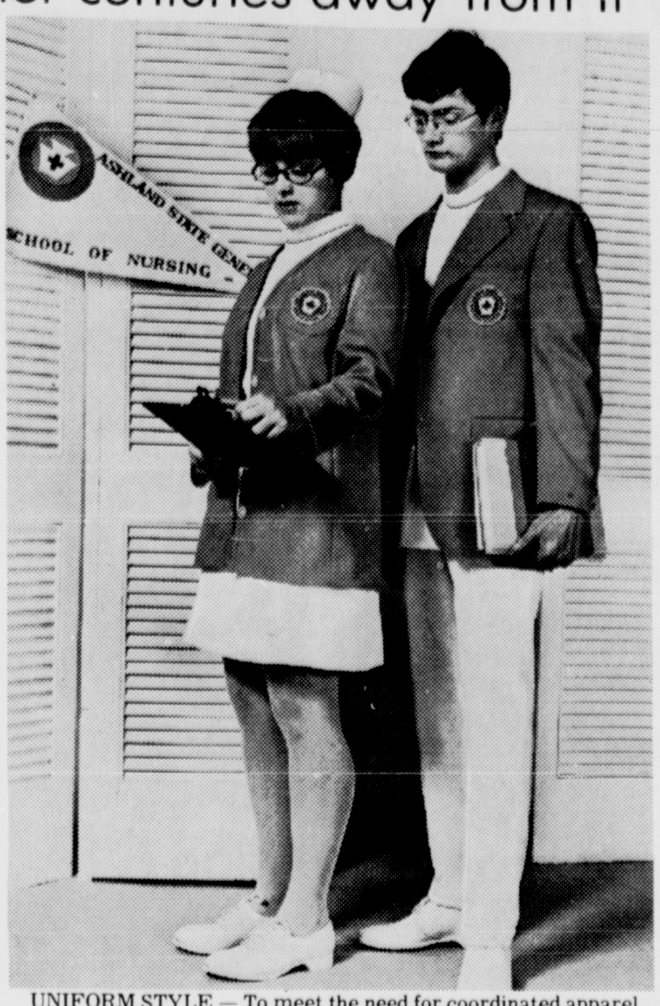
Men entering nursing in volume after centuries away from it



UNIFORM STYLE — To meet the need for coordinated apparel for male and female nursing students, Liz'beth Designs has a new collection of coordinated ensembles. The uniforms, designed in easy care doubleknit Encron polyester, are available with colorful braid trim to match school or class colors. Debra Kubitsky, left, wears a turtleneck, modified A-line style in white with gold piping and a gold blazer. Student nurse Dale Smith wears a modified turtleneck tunic, also trimmed in gold, with a matching blazer. Both are students at the Ashland State Hospital School of Nursing.

By AP NEWSFEATURES

NEW YORK (AP) — NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP) — When most people think of the stars of the nursing profession they think of Florence Nightingale.

of the 11th century, the celebrated knights of the Middle Ages banded together in military nursing orders to build hospitals to care for the sick and wounded.

Somewhere along the line they released their foothold and nursing became a women's profession.

But times are again changing. Men see nursing as a new frontier profession. Enrollmennt in schools of nursing across the country reflect this new attitude. Such schools and professional associations are recruiting men on a massive scale, pointing out veterans benefits for education and scholarship assistance.

In 1953, total male enrollment in nursing schools in Ohio was 18. In 1971, the fall enrollment in just one city in that state, Cleveland, was 49, according to the National Student Nurses Association.

Shortages of nurses in hospitals across the country is one factor in the increase of men in student nursing programs.

Former military medical corpsmen are being hired by hospitals to supplement professional nursing staff and encouraged to continue their training to enter the nursing field.

Many men in safety professions, such as police and firemen, are studying in evenings. At Hunter College - Bellevue School of Nursing in New York City, the experimental nursing program trains such safety personnel for a second career after retirement.

The American Journal of Nursing recently featured an article suggesting that the new image of the profession would require a name change. Health Care Practitioners was suggested as a new title for nurses and School of Health Care Practice was the name suggested for schools of nursing.

Nuclear power plant work behind, but hopes brighten

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear power, once hailed as the solution to the nation's energy problems in the 1970s and beyond, is falling far short of the goals set for it.

Costly delays in getting nuclear power plants into operation could contribute to some power shortages this summer and next winter, according to the Atomic Energy Commission.

But the AEC and the 10-year-old atomic power industry contend that nuclear power is going to be a major source of U.S. electricity, and in time to help offset especially critical energy pinches envisioned for the 1980s.

Still, the industry has only 29 nuclear plants in operation, compared with 46 forecast by the government two years ago. A total of 57 plants are under construction, but 90 per cent are at least a year behind schedule.

Causes of the delays range from technical difficulties and labor problems to stiffer licensing requirements and environmental issues, according to federal and industry officials.

The delays are serious enough to raise questions about the ability of government and industry to step up the pace of development, especially to help meet energy requirements in the next decade.

AEC and industry spokesmen concede the going has been rough in recent years and serious difficulties remain, but they say 1972 may have represented a turning point away from their problems.

Chief reason for their cautious optimism:

—Besides the plants now operating or under construction, 77 others already are contracted for, including a record 35 ordered in 1972. The 35 plants together would generate 42.5 million kilowatts, almost three times the present nuclear generating capacity which provides about four per cent of the nation's electricity.

The AEC says a similar amount of nuclear generating capacity is expected to be contracted for in 1973, adding that "the situation on construction slippages is viewed as temporary and continued strong growth of nuclear power additions is expected to occur."

—Industry commitments for the 77 plants now on order amount to about $50 billion in capital costs. For example, Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago, one of the nuclear industry leaders, has announced it will spend at the rate of $1 million a day for the next five years on construction, most of it nuclear.

But AEC and industry optimism must be weighed against the fact that currently it takes up to nine years from initial planning states for a nuclear plant go into operation.

Still, the AEC appears confident that such lead time can be shortened and now forecasts that by the end of 1980 the nation's nuclear power capacity will be nearly 10 times greater than present.

By mid-1980s, the AEC and the utilities industry say, nuclear power will contribute 34 per cent of the nation's electricity and by the turn of the century 60 per cent, with the help of so-called nuclear breeder reactors.

The AEC concedes it has had to lower slightly projections made a little more than a year ago for nuclear capacity in the early 1980s, but it said its forecasts are "still within the probable range suggested "in earlier predictions.

What are the chances of meeting these forecasts?

Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., chairman of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Committee, said in an interview that there's no guarantee that they will be realized. "So far previous projections haven't been correct."

Price added that "while there is not an urgent need for nuclear power right now, it has to begin to show up as a major source of electricity from the 1980s on or we're in desperate trouble."

Price said his committee asked the AEC some time ago "to tell us what they need in the way of legislation" to speed the licensing process. But the AEC has yet to come up with suggested legislation, he said.

The AEC says tough new environmental laws established in 1969 and protests by environmentalists have figured in some construction delays.

A review of the environmental compatability of 100 plants in operation, under construction or planned played a prominent part in a hiatus of 17 months ending in May 1972 during which no major licensing actions were taken. Both the AEC and industry have charged some environmentalists with using unjustifiable delaying tactics.

But the commission indicates that most of the construction delays have been due to other reasons, including:

—Lack of standardization in plant design. On this score, L. Manning Muntzing, the AEC's director of regulation, says a factor "impending the acceleration of licensing decisions has been the tendency for nuclear power plants to be built on a one-of-a-kind basis. Some new plants are larger and more complex than their predecessors, while others incorporate design changes which make them different without apparent advantage."

—Late delivery of equipment. This was one factor contributing to the delay of three plants of the Tennessee Valley Authority at Decatur, Ala.

—Labor problems, including strikes and low labor productivity. These were among contributing factors responsible for the delay of Consolidated Edison Company's big Indian Point 2 plant north of New York City.

—"Quality assurance difficulties," that is, problems arising from component equipment "not manufactured under specifications under which it was ordered." This, says the AEC, was among the problems besetting Duke Power Company's 841,000 kilowatt Oconee 2 plant at Seneca, S.C.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has urged the AEC to declare a moratorium on building all proposed nuclear power plants and those in the early construction stage "until all safety-related issues are resolved."

Nader and an organization called the "Union of Concerned Scientists" also recommended power cutbacks of up to 50 per cent at all 29 nuclear power plants now in operation.

Nader and the scientists' group declared "the danger of catastrophic nuclear power plant accidents is a public safety problem of the utmost urgency in the country today."

The AEC, in a draft of a proposed new report to Congress on the safety of nuclear reactors, says the chances are only about one in 100 billion each year of a truly major accident, one releasing 5 million curies of radioactivity. A curie is equivalent to the radiation released by one gram of radium.

BLUE RIBBON CHAMPS

Claudia Becht, Miami Trace Foreign Exchange Student from Germany, was the honored guest speaker at the Blue Ribbon Champs 4-H Club Meeting. She explained how she got to come to America through the AFS Program, showed slides of her home country, and answered questions from the interested 4-H club members.

In Julie Frost's absence, Jeff Smithson read her report on "Your Personal Health Record." Each member was given a Health Record Booklet to fill out so they would have a complete Health History of their medical protection, dental care and medical examinations.

Mark Holloway began his health report on "There Are Smiles," by pointing out that people who have happy smiles, have sound teeth. He then gave a few pointers on how to care for your teeth.

"Rural Fires . . . Prevent'em or Fight'em," was the topic of Eddie Armintrout's safety report. Eddie gave each member a booklet containing facts about fires and a checklist on how you, your farm and community rate on fire prevention.

J.T. Perrill gave his safety report on "Bicycle Safety." He pointed out the necessary equipment on bicycles, such as lights and reflectors, to insure safe riding at night.

Darla Krupla gave a talk on "How to Give a Demonstration." She pointed out several things judges would look for in demonstrations given at the fair, such as originality, appearance, delivery and conclusion.

Two new members, Wayne Matthews and Cindi Bright, were introduced to the club, and dates for the program and constitution committee meetings were set.

Terri and Raymond Mick led the club in a game of "Pass the Mousetrap, which was enjoyed by all.

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)
A day of mixed influences. Some uncertainties may prove irksome, but don't fight shadows. Clear thinking needed.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)
Be careful in your approaches now. Others may read more into your words and actions than you intend.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)
Personal relationships governed by beneficent influences. A day in which you can successfully combine business and pleasure.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)
You man encounter an unusual — and knotty — business problem. Don't try to solve it by taking short-cuts. Only well-tested methods will work.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)
An excellent day for considering new business arrangements — especially if they involve real estate or property improvements.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)
You usually like to solve your own problems but this is a period in which another's idea may have more merit than your own.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)
A good day for trying to push through a unique program. You will get backing from those in authority — IF you make the first move.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)
An occupational situation may tax your ingenuity but cast aside any doubts of your ability to handle. By midday, you'll have the answers you need.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)
You usually have good control of your emotions but feelings are likely to run high now, so be forewarned. Maintain the judicial calm for which the Sagittarian is noted.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)
Some confusion in day's early hours can be cleared up if you just roll with the punches. Trying to crash your way through it will only worsen matters.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)
Scutinize all documents carefully now. In contracts or estimates, especially, you should regard any kind of escape clause as suspect.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)
You may receive a job offer which entails greater responsibility but, along with them, your opportunities will multiply. Think carefully.

YOU BORN TODAY are governed by Aries, zodiacal Sign of strength, purpose, versatility, mental and physical vitality. You have a magnetic personality, enjoy people, seeing new places, travel for adventure. You love to entertain and you make many friends along life's way — but you sometimes lose them through overaggressiveness or an occasional tendency to "talk out of turn." Try to curb these traits — for your own peace of mind. There are many fields in which you could carve a successful career but, with your gift for words, you would probably enjoy writing the most. If you do not take up some form of literature as an occupation, you would surely enjoy a hobby along these lines. Other excellent outlets for your talents: Music, the theater, the law, politics, sculpture.

Battles under way across Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Government troops are reported fighting their first major offensive operation in 15 months, but other units closer to the capital have fled under Communist pressure.

Field reports said Communist forces drove the government soldiers from Prasat Nsang Khmau, 33 miles south of Phnom Penh. The reports said 50 government soldiers were killed and 80 wounded in the battle Saturday before they reached the town of Chambak, four miles away.

Another government garrison about 15 miles southeast of Chambak was hit by about 1,000 rounds of mortar fire Saturday, and those troops also rushed to Chambak, according to the reports.

As they fled, the reports said, the government soldiers were pursued by two American armored personnel carriers captured by the Communists. The evacuating troops left behind five 105mm howitzers, six mortars and eight trucks loaded with ammunition.

The new offensive by the Cambodian government is against Khmer Rouge guerrillas holding Mt. Kirirom, 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh. The campaign has not been announced by the military command, but the army newspaper The Resistance said in its Sunday edition the operation got underway March 25.

This report said the government force had captured several positions at the foot of the mountain, but the Communist rebels remained well entrenched on the mountain's summit.

It was the first time the Cambodian army has gone on the offensive since December, 1971, when it tried to open the highway from Phnom Penh to the provincial capital of Kompong Thom, 80 miles to the north. That drive failed and government casualties were heavy.

American bombers kept up their pounding of Communist positions in Cambodia. The U.S. Pacific Military Command in Honolulu reported B52 heavy bombers and fighter-bombers carried out raids Sunday at about the same intensity as those of past weeks.

Ohio voting reforms advocated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio General Assembly may find itself being bypassed in a Democratic Party move to take an election reform amendment directly to the people next November.

The Ohio Democratic Executive Committee met here Saturday and voted to create a special committee to keep a watch on the progress of pending election reform measures in the legislature.

Democratic leaders adopted a resolution calling on the Ohio Republican Party and all other political parties in the state to join in urging the legislature to pass election reforms.

State Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, warned that the Democrats have "some balance now" that they didn't have before they took control in the House.

The committee also voted Saturday to place Henry Donnell of Paulding County on the Democratic State Central Committee, replacing Robert Reider of Port Clinton, who resigned.

The election reforms urged by Democrats include:

—Confining to a single question as to voting residence the information that could be required for registration.

—Eliminating a requirement for boards of election to send post cards to confirm that a voter's residence has not changed.

—Allowing challenged voters to cast their ballots with the challenge to be resolved after the election.

—Extending the deadline for initiating recounts from five to 10 days after an election, and requiring election board financing of recounts if there is a difference between candidates of 1 per cent or less of the votes cast.

—Placing the burden of proof on the secretary of state if he rejects an election board appointment on grounds of incompetence.

—Allowing registration of voters by deputy registrars with county-wide jurisdiction.

—Requiring boards of election to publish voter directories and make them available to the public.

—Holding Ohio's non-presidential year primaries on the first Tuesday after the second Monday in September, and holding them on the first Tuesday after the second Monday in June in presidential election years.

—Eliminating a requirement that candidates' petitions be notarized.

—Eliminating a requirement for absentee ballots to be notarized.

One injury, 3 citations in accidents

Five traffic accidents resulting in one injury and three citations, were investigated over the weekend by city police and sheriff's departments. Damage in the crashes was moderate.

Fern A. Miller, 47, Rt. 2, was treated at Memorial Hospital Saturday morning for a contusion of the right temple after her car and a semi-rig collided at the U.S. 35-Hutchinson-Yeoman Road intersection. She was released.

Sheriff's deputies said the crash occurred when a semi-rig driven by James W. Humphreys, 32, Charleston, W. Va., attempted to pass the Miller car which was making a left turn onto Hutchinson-Yeoman Road.

Humphrey's was cited for passing at an intersection. Mrs. Miller's 1972 model car was extensively damaged.

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES charged Harry C. Mongold, 50, of 1013 Willard St., with failure to yield right of way after a car-truck crash on the CCC Highway-W at Matthews Road Sunday afternoon.

The Mongold truck was eastbound and attempted to make a left turn onto Matthews Road, pulling into the path of westbound car driven by David M. Price, 22, of Columbus, officers reported.

Damage to both vehicles was moderate. A passenger in the Mongold truck complained of an injury, but was not treated at the time.

Other mishaps were:

Tax estimate due April 6

CINCINNATI — If your total estimated income tax and self-employment tax for 1973 exceeds your income tax withholding by $100 or more, you should file a declaration of estimated tax, Paul A. Schuster, district director of Internal Revenue for Southern Ohio, Points out.

Form 1040-ES contains detailed instructions on how to file. The IRS sent this form to everyone who filed a declaration last year and to others who, according to IRS records, probably should make a declaration.

Schuster said vouchers and pre-addressed envelopes were included in the tax return package for the taxpayers' convenience.

Estimates for 1973 are due by April 16, the same date that 1972 federal income tax returns are due.

The 1040-ES Forms are available at local IRS offices for those who need them but did not receive copies in the mail.

You may also be required to file a declaration of estimated tax if you have more than $500 in income not subject to withholding, if you are retired or will retire soon, or if you income exceeds certain limits.

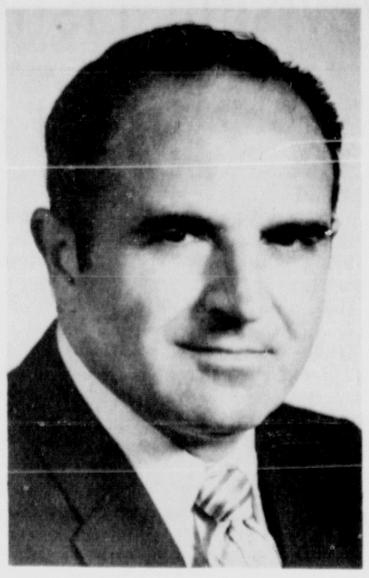
Ohio transportation chief to address Democrats



J. PHILLIP RICHLEY

J. Phillip Richley, director of the newly-created Ohio Department of Transportation, will be the principal speaker at the Fayette County Democrat Club's annual spring dinner Friday at the Terrace Lounge.

A social hour will open the program at 6 p.m. followed by a roast beef dinner at 7 p.m.

Tickets, priced at $5 per person, may be purchased by contacting Richard Kimmet (335-4699), Milbourne Barney (335-7514) or Joe Murphy (335-8359). Reservations must be made by Wednesday.

RICHLEY has had a distinguished career in transportation planning and highway engineering.

Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan has called Richley "uniquely qualified for this extremely important and difficult job," pointing to his "vast experience not only in administration and in engineering, but in the vitally important area of mass transit and its relationship to highway programs."

As head of the transportation department, Richley oversees the operations of four divisions, highways, urban mass transportation, transportation planning and aviation.

Prior to his appointment as highway director in 1970, Richley was Mahoning County engineer and served as president of the Mahoning-Trumbull County Transportation Study and president of the Mahoning Valley Regional Mass Transit Authority.

Richley attended John Carroll University and the University of Michigan and received his engineering degree in 1954 from Youngstown State University. In 1971 he was awarded an honorary Doctor of Engineering degree from Youngstown State University.

FOLLOWING a tour with the U.S. Navy, he worked as a draftsman from 1947 - 50. He joined the city of Youngstown as a surveyor and later became assistant city engineer, sanitary engineer, commissioner of engineering and finally director of public works. He was a construction engineer for the Ohio Department of Highways in 1958-59.

Richley is active in many civic and church activities, including the advisory board of St. Elizabeth Hospital, the advisory board of the Youngstowr State University Technical School and the Choffin Vocational School, the Easter Seal Society, the Ohio County Engineers Association, the St. Anthony's Society, the Sons of Italy and the Italian-American War Veterans. He was named "Man of the Year" by the Italian-American Democrat League of Cleveland in 1972. He and his wife, Josephine, have two children.

Link fingerprints to missing coed

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Milwaukee police official said Sunday fingerprints found in a car belonging to a missing Michigan coed are those of Orville Leland Davis, 30, of Ohio.

Detective Inspector Leo Woelfel said Davis' fingerprints matched those found in the car of Melanie Fahr, 20, Troy, Mich., who has been missing since Tuesday.

Thirteen Miami Trace High School students were among the 350 who displayed projects at the district Science Fair Saturday at Central State University.

Barbara Beal, David Foster and John Bryant, all MTHS juniors, and Milton Crum, a senior, received high scores and are now eligible to compete in the state Science Fair April 14 at the State Fairground.

Barbara's project of map scales of ancient maps was rated as one of the seven best at the district fair. Her work on this project will be footnoted in a book, "Maps of the Ancient Sea Kings," by Charles H. Hapgood, which is to be released this spring.

Foster's star atlas involved much experimentation with different films and developers to make a photographic atlas of the heavens. His project also was one of the top seven.

CRUM'S PROJECT used electrically charged water to precipitate smoke as a possible solution for smog control.

Although junior high school students are not eligible to go on to the state competition from the district Science Fair, John Beal, of Bloomingburg, Gary Foster, of Eber, and David Keim and Kim Vonley, of Jeffersonville, received high scores Saturday.

Five of the judges were from Fayette County. They were Bill Sollars and Darrell Debolt, of Agrico, and John Streber, Russell Hall and Harold Gass, teachers.

The table decorations were bowling pins painted and decorated to look like Cub Scouts and small wheelbarrow flower carts. These had been made by the Cubs, who also made the flower corsages for the mothers.

Cubmaster Robert Highfield introduced Roger Mesecher who gave the invocation. After dinner Highfield introduced John Rich, assistant Cubmaster, who gave special awards to Lee Lynch, Steve Osborne. Harvey Morgan, Woody Bereman and Jeff Mesecher. He also presented to John E. Rhoads a plaque of appreciation for his service to this pack for the past five years.

Boy succumbs after ingesting quantity of drugs

GOSHEN, Ohio (AP) — A six-year-old Goshen boy who ate a quantity of drugs he believed was candy March 24, died Sunday in a Cincinnati hospital without regaining consciousness.

Mark Stringer, of the Gaslight Village Mobile Home Park, went into convulsions after telling his parents he didn't want supper because he had eaten candy given him by friends.

Clermont County Sheriff Donald Watson conducted a house-to-house survey in an unsuccessful attempt to find out who gave the drugs to the boy.

He speculated other children may have obtained the drugs from a medicine chest and given them to Mark.

TV Viewing

NEW YORK (AP) — The 51st annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters has signed off, leaving the industry to worry about topless matters amid hope for good legislative news.

"Topless" radio talk shows that treat sexual matters lightly and with a leer emerged as a major concern for the NAB leadership at last week's convention in Washington, D.C.

On the positive side, the conventioneers decamped for home with optimism Congress will revise the Federal Communications Act to extend the three-year period that broadcast licenses now can be held and tighten the rules of competition for them at license renewal time.

The hope and worry are at particularly high levels this year because NAB is making a concerted effort to get Congress to lengthen broadcast licenses to five years.

Virtually all the 83 broadcast license bills now before Congress specify this period, according to a spokesman for NAB, which represents 3,620 radio and 534 TV stations, in addition to the four radio and three television networks in the United States.

It's a powerful group, but it moved briskly last Tuesday when the FCC said it was starting a "nonpublic" inquiry into alleged cases of broadcast obscenity.

By nightfall, the NAB's board of directors unanimously had adopted a resolution that in effect seeks to persuade NAB members and the entire industry to tone down or throw out spicy broadcasting that is causing heavy public and congressional gripes at a critical time.

FCC chairman Dean Burch hammered home the point the next day in a speech to the NAB's closing session. He assailed topless radio as "prurient trash," "electronic voyeurism" and "garbage, pure and simple."

He urged the industry to put pressure on tasteless broadcasters and praised the NAB resolution as a good start.

Ironically, despite all the congressional clamor over what many listeners say is obscenity or indecency, in topless radio, such programs aren't exactly rampant in America. There are about 12 on the air today, according to "Broadcasting," an industry magazine.

Jaycee cage tourney opens tonight

By MIKE FLYNN
Record Herald Sports Editor

The fourth annual Washington C. H. Jaycee Independent basketball tournament will open tonight at the Washington Junior High School gymnasium.

Four games starting at 6:10 p.m. will open the tourney, which has annually been a drawing card for some of the top basketball talent in the area.

A total of 10 teams have entered this year's shooting match and the field is headed by Wilson Lumber, the defending tourney champions, although no team has won consecutive titles in the three previous events.

WILSON LUMBER, an always-tough member of the Washington C. H. Independent basketball league, will plunge into tonight's action with probably the tourney's most flashy roster.

The Lumbermen have Mel Nowell, the former Ohio State whiz who helped them to last year's tourney championship, plus Fletcher Yates and Ron Coleman, both Wilmington College stars.

Wilson Lumber meets the Washington Savings Bank in tonight's third game, which will mostly likely start at about 8:30 p.m. and tops the four-game card. The Savings Bank

Don Gullett on mound for Cincinnati debut

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Don Gullett, the young lefthander who has drawn the prestigious opening day pitching assignment for the Cincinnati Reds Thursday, readily admits he has a lot to be thankful for.

Gullett, who's only 22, but is entering his fourth season with Cincinnati, will face the San Francisco Giants and Juan Marichal in the traditional opener before a sellout crowd in the Reds' Riverfront Stadium.

"Things, good things, have just kept happening for me," said Gullett, who battled hepatitis all last season while winning nine and losing 10.

"I guess all I can do is hope better and better things continue to happen."

The good things started happening for Gullett in 1970 when, with just one year of professional experience, he jumped from Cincinnati's Sioux Falls Class A farm team to the major leagues and recorded a 5-2 record while helping the Reds to a National League pennant.

At 19, he found himself pitching in a World Series.

The next season, while the Reds were falling apart, Gullett won 16 and lost 6. Then came 1972 and his sickness.

But last year had a bright side—another pennant and a World Series.

"I'm just 22, and already I've been in two playoffs and two World Series. Now I'm going to get to pitch on opening day," Gullett said.

As could be expected, Gullett accepts the opening day assignment as an honor and also as a challenge.

DON GULLETT

"You want to get off to a good start," he said. "You want to be 1-0 and you want the team to be 1-0."

The butterflies that accompany any opening day will be there, of course, but Gullett's nature is such that they won't be apparent on the surface.

"I try to keep my emotions from showing," the Lynn, Ky., native said. "I'll be nervous, but that's not too bad. There's a difference between being nervous and being scared."

Bankers cop second in Sabina tourney

The Savings Bank, led by Gary Shaffer, downed Sabina Uhl's IGA Foodliner by a 93-83 score to force the finals of the double elimination tourney into an extra contest. The Bankers then dropped an 82-79 decision.

The Bankers, who finished the tourney with a 4-2 record, would have been forced to beat Uhl's IGA twice to win the championship.

team was the champion in the Washington C. H. Independent championship race this season and finished second in the Sabina Lions Club tournament over the weekend.

Injuries plagued the Savings Bank in its final game of the Sabina tournament against Sabina Uhl's IGA Foodliner, but the Bankers have added players from the Miami Trace Faculty team.

West Union, the champion of the Sinking Spring independent tournament two weeks ago, and Hill's Dairy Kream, of Mount Sterling, are billed in the opening game with Puckett's All-Stars, which is being sponsored by Hidy's Super Market, of Washington C. H., and Bob Roberts Construction Co., of Leesburg, meeting in the second contest. In the nightcap, Superior Carpet, of Wilmington, and Hiller's Fire Equipment Co. will clash.

DICK ANTHONY, president of the Washington C. H. Jaycees, said four games will be played on Tuesday night and three on Wednesday. The championship game is scheduled Saturday.

All proceeds realized from the tournament will go toward the Jaycee-sponsored Fourth of July fireworks celebration in Washington C. H., Anthony said.

Admission is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for students.

Pearson picks up Atlanta 500 win

Yarborough completed his driving course cum laude in 1970 after winning nine superspeedway events for the famed car-building family from Stuart, Va.

Pearson, 38, last December and proud of the grey in his otherwise coal black hair, stepped to the head of the class after Yarborough's departure and now has tacked eight big ones to the Woods lengthening list of major triumphs.

The latest came Sunday at Atlanta International Raceway when Pearson outdueled alumnus Yarborough to win the $111,225 Atlanta 500 that drew a surprising 72,000 persons to wet and muddy grounds.

A driving, bumper-to-bumper finish appeared in prospect until Yarborough's Chevrolet wilted under the pressure and began overheating with 65 miles to go.

Pearson, who now has won his last two starts, led 157 of the 328 laps in posting an average speed of 139.391 miles per hour. Yarborough, who won three straight Atlanta 500s for the Wood Brothers beginning in 1968, paced the field 153 laps.

There were two other leaders. Richard Petty, stock car racing's only $1 million winner, though Pearson is creeping up on that mark, was in front only two occasions for 13 laps early in the race.

Brewer wins award; East loses contest

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Jim Brewer had just scored 19 points, grabbed 14 rebounds, blocked five shots and stole the basketball a couple of times.

To his surprise, the 6-foot-9 Minnesota Olympian was named the Star of Stars, even though the East lost to the West 98-94 Saturday in the Coaches' All-Star Game.

"I felt somebody on the winning side would get the award," Brewer said.

"I was just trying to do what I know best, rebound at both ends and play defense. I didn't try to score that much," he said.

Brewer, who averaged only 14 points for the Gophers this season, scored all of his points in the second half, nearly leading the East to a successful comeback.

Brigham Young Athletic Director Stan Watts, the West's coach, thought his team's bench was the difference.

"When we put that second five in midway in the first half, we got to shooting better," said Watts.

The West, with seven players in double figures, pulled away to a 53-38 halftime lead and then withstood an East rally in the last seconds, ending a fourgame victory streak for the East.

"I made a mistake trying to give the players equal playing time," he drawled. "I'll never do that again. Some of those boys should have played the whole game. Some of the others should have just watched the whole game."

Jim Godman winner of bowling tournament

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Winning the Firestone Tournament of Champions four years ago was a highlight of his career, but Jim Godman says becoming the event's first two-time titlist "has to be my biggest thrill."

The 27-year-old Lorain, Ohio, bowler pocketed the $25,000 first prize Saturday after knocking off long-time great Dick Weber of St. Louis, 227-192, and then downing Barry Asher of Costa Mesa, Calif., 224-200, in the title match.

Nearly 300 attend

Coaches well-pleased with clinic turnout

Coaches from Washington C. H. and Miami Trace high schools were well-pleased with the turnout of nearly 300 persons at the all-age baseball clinic held Saturday at Washington Senior High School.

Rodger Mickle, head baseball coach at Washington C. H. who served as the clinic's director, said approximately 243 youngsters and 45 adults attended the clinic. The 45 adults included several Little League and Babe Ruth League baseball coaches, he said.

The clinic, which was held in the Washington Senior High School gymnasium because of Saturday's rain showers, gave persons of all ages in Fayette County an opportunity to receive valuable instruction on baseball techniques.

MEMBERS OF the Washington C. H. Blue Lion baseball team were used by the clinic's five-man staff to demonstrate the topics which ranged from hitting to practice organization.

Six baseball caps, seven bats, 12 baseballs and three pairs of knee-length socks were given as door prizes.

Mickle thanked all who attended and participated and said the clinic staff will meet later this week to iron out the bus to make next year's clinic an even smoother event.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The $10-million dream, which ended with an explosion for Joe Frazier, faded quietly for Muhammad Ali.

His voice quieted by a broken jaw and his manner subdued after 12 rounds with a younger, stronger foe, Ali stood in his corner Saturday and heard what he probably had guessed: he had lost, amazingly to Ken Norton by a split decision.

A few months ago, before Frazier walked into several of George Foreman haymakers in Jamaica, a Frazier-Ali rematch loomed that would outdraw their "Fight of the Century" and give Ali the chance to erase the only blot on his record and retire as champion.

Instead, the previously anonymous Norton, 28, now is the logical challenger to Foreman, while the future of the 31-year-old Ali is in doubt.

The broken jaw "shouldn't hamper his career," Dr. William Lundeen, the supervising ring physician, said after a 1½hour operation Saturday night. But Norton's trainer, Eddie Futch, when asked about a rematch with Ali, said: "Sure, if the money's right. But right now we don't need him."

Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee, said Sunday that the boxer would be hospitalized "for two or three days" for the operation to wire his left jaw bone which was broken three-quarters of an inch apart.

Dundee said, "From all indications, he's going to be fine." He said "We've already talked and he asked how long it might be before he can get back in training."

Ali, who had won 10 straight since losing to Frazier, was a 5-1 favorite over Norton, whose 30 victims in 31 fights were even more obscure. But Norton helped even the odds by starting a rigorous training program Feb. 22 while Ali trained lightly until the final week.

Ali, who lost for the second time in 43 fights, earned $210,000 to Norton's $50,000.

Ali's jaw was broken early in the fight. Dundee, said it happened in the first round, though Norton didn't appear to land a solid blow in the round. Futch thinks it was in the fourth round.

Greensboro finale set today

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Most of pro golf's leading lights aren't overly concerned about a one-day delay in getting to Augusta, Ga., for the start of the famed Masters Tournament on Thursday.

"I don't think it makes any difference at all," said Billy Casper. "You'll still be able to play a couple of practice rounds and that's all you need."

Graham and Casper shared the lead at 199, a whopping 14 under par, going into today's rain-delayed final round in the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

The Greensboro finish was pushed back one day by a series of rains that have deluged this area and turned the 7,021-yard, par-71 Sedgefield Country Club course into a quagmire.

Saturday's play was washed out by a 1½-inch rain. A double round of 36 holes was scheduled Sunday but the course was unplayable—with much of it under water—for the morning round and only the afternoon half was played.

That forced a Monday windup and delayed most of the players' travel plans for Augusta by a day.

Walton and Ratleff head All-Americans

NEW YORK (AP) — UCLA's Bill Walton and Ed Ratleff of Long Beach State led the balloting for the annual National Basketball Association College All-America Team for 1972-73 in coaches' selections announced today.

The first team also included Doug Collins of Illinois State, David Thompson of North Carolina State and Jim Brewer of Minnesota.

Sunday bad day for hurlers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some of baseball's better pitchers tuned up Sunday for the approaching opening of the season but most were off-key.

Item: The San Francisco Giants rapped Oakland's Vida Blue for seven runs on 10 hits— including two triples and four doubles—in five innings en route to a 10-9 exhibition victory over the A's.

Item: The Milwaukee Brewers pounded Chicago ace Ferguson Jenkins for five runs in six innings and continued their 16-hit assault on Larry Gura for an 8-4 triumph over the Cubs.

Item: The Texas Rangers teed off on Kansas City's Dick Drago for seven runs and nine hits in four innings and held off the Royals 8-6.

Item: New York's Tom Seaver was supposed to go seven innings but was tagged for three runs and left after four innings because of a chewed-up mound in the Mets' 13-inning 43 victory over the New York Yankees.

Item: Pittsburgh's Nelson Briles shut out Cincinnati for four innings but Larry Stahl pinch hit a fifth-inning homer and, after a walk to Joe Morgan, Johnny Bench also connected as the Reds beat the Pirates 4-1.

Some others pitched well, but were simply outdueled.

Item: Ernie McAnally hurled eight innings of four-hit ball as the Montreal Expos blanked the Philadelphia Phillies and Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton 3-0.

Item: Bob Gibson of St. Louis faltered in the second inning against three light hitters—Eddie Leon walked, rival pitcher Stan Bahnsen doubled and Buddy Bradford singled them both home—as the Chicago White Sox downed the Cardinals 2-0.

However, California's Nolan Ryan, Minnesota's Bill Hands and Cleveland's Steve Dunning came through for the pitchers' union.

Item: Ryan, who won 19 games last year and led the majors in strikeouts, allowed only two singles as the Angels nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1.

Item: Hands, acquired from the Cubs in a winter deal, gave up one run in seven innings as the Twins edged the Houston Astros 3-2.

Item: Dunning scattered four singles in six innings as the Indians blanked the San Diego Padres 2-0.

Elsewhere, the Boston Red Sox shaded the Detroit Tigers 6-5 while the Baltimore Orioles and Atlanta Braves traded seven home runs and 27 hits before they were halted after 14 innings by a curfew tied at 9-all.

Maintenance work scheduled

Routine maintenance projects will occupy most of the time this week of city, state and county road crews in Fayette County.

Bill Duncan, acting superintendent of the City Street Department, said crews will continue the street sign painting and straightening project. Other work on the schedule includes cleaning sewers, streets and catch basins.

County Engineer Charles P. Wagner said county crews will be widening berms and grading Robinson Road and Old Chillicothe Road. Ditch work is scheduled on Camp Grove Road and Robinson Road, and county crews will be installing culverts along other roads in the county. Crews also are scheduled to resume work on Railroad Street in Jeffersonville.

State crews, according to Superintendent Gene Fitzpatric, will continue to clean and paint equipment. Workmen will finish installing a culvert on Ohio 729, north of Jeffersonville, and will be sealing cracks on U.S. 62 and Ohio 734. Crews will also be patching highways throughout the county.

Fitzpatric also reported that a state crew has installed two poles on U.S. 35 at the intersection of Palmer Road, and two lights are to be placed there.

USO names Ohioan acting national chief

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The United Service Organizations (USO) Inc., has named Michael E. Menster, 33, a native of Canton, Ohio, to be acting national executive director.

The appointment was announced Saturday night during a weekend banquet at the USO's annual National Council Meeting. The appointment is still subject to confirmation by the USO board.

Blast damages store

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Police say an explosion, apparently caused by a bomb, shattered the windows and front door of a local Lawson grocery store early this morning.

State eyes park near Columbus

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The last opportunity for the state to locate a major state park in the Columbus area may require purchase of 2,400 acres near the Alum Creek Dam in Dalaware County.

Ohio Natural Resources Department Director William Nye said a look at a map will show that "Columbus is a natural for a park and lodge." And Nye says the "Alum Creek project may be the last chance to get a park in the area."

Nye says $400,000 of the department's federal revenue-sharing funds are going to be used to purchase 400 acres. The remaining portion is to be acquired with grants from the federal government and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The dam is scheduled to be completed in May, 1974.

Virginia man killed in parachute jump

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio (AP) — Wayne Furr, 21, of Hopewell, Va., was killed Saturday in his first sport parachute jump.

Gallia County deputies said Furr dropped 2,800 feet when his parachute failed to open. He did not use his reserve chute, officials said.

He was a member of the Greene County Parachute Club in Xenia.

Lillian Gish's papers, given to the manuscript collection of the Library of Congress, show that she carefully annotated her scripts to achieve precisely the effects she wanted.

Famed German singer to become a director

He will conduct three concerts in 1974, March 21, 22 and 24.

Two weeks later, Fischer-Dieskau will return as soloist, with conductor Zubin Mehta and pianist Daniel Barenboim, who also sometimes conducts, for an all-Schumann program.

The baritone already has begun to conduct in Europe and has had a recording session in London.

Free concerts all set for historic U.S. sites

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Park Service and American Landmark Festivals are giving nine weeks of free concerts, two a week at two historic sites here.

The sites are Theodore Roosevelt's birthplace, where he lived for the first 15 years of his life, and Federal Hall, a site once occupied by the Capitol of the United States, where George Washington was inaugurated as President.

Historical exhibits at the sites will be open to visitors before the concerts and during intermissions. Music will include songs by the early American composer, Francis Hopkinson, whom Washington knew and liked.

Opening lead — ace of diamonds.

Partnership misunderstandings are certainly not a rarity, even in the highest echelons of bridge. Consider this deal from the 1969 Trials where George Rapee and Sidney Lazard settled in four hearts with a 4-1 trump fit, when all the time they could have made six clubs with perfectly normal play.

Rapee's diamond cuebid suggested that partner bid a new suit, but Lazard couldn't very well oblige. Instead he tried to show reasonably good spades and moderate high-card strength by jumping to three spades.

When Rapee bid four clubs, Lazard tried to indicate a heart feature in the form of a singleton by responding four hearts. Lazard thought his partner would not read this as a heart suit, since he had denied heart length earlier.

But Rapee thought otherwise — he assumed that South had three or four hearts — and passed.

Oddly enough, four hearts proved unbeatable! Lazard wound up losing a diamond and two trumps, and so made the contract.

Even if West had led a trump originally, declarer would still have succeeded. After cashing the A-K-Q of trumps and A-K of spades, felling the queen, South would play the jack of clubs.

Whether West covered or not, declarer would lead the jack of spades at the earliest opportunity and discard a diamond. Regardless of how the opponents elected to defend thereafter South would make ten tricks for sure, and if the defense slipped only slightly he would finish with eleven.

But despite the amazing outcome of the hand, we continue to recommend to our readers that they avoid 4-1 trumps fits!

Be Careful About Vitamins

With all the talk and concentration on vitamins, I don't recall reading any definitive article on the dangers of too much vitamin intake.

I read the numbers on the labels, but they have no meaning to me. One of the things that confuses me is the use of the phrase "daily requirement" on labels. If the particular pill fills the "daily requirement" need for certain vitamins, does that mean that food eaten containing that vitamin would be dangerously excessive?

Mrs. L. H., Maine

Dear Mrs. H.:

The emphasis, and sometimes overemphasis, on vitamins has introduced much confusion to many people.

One of the reasons for this confusion is that some manufacturers oversell their product by asking the consumer to compare the "numbers" on their label with that of another manufacturer.

It is understandable that "higher numbers" may seem to be more impressive than "lower numbers" even though the body may not require such a large quantity.

Fortunately, the wisdom of the body is such that it has its own protective devices against the excess use of some vitamins. That which is not needed is excreted through the urine.

Many physicians learn that some patients falsely reason about vitamins in the following way:

They believe that if one vitamin tablet is good, two are better, and three are best. Herein lies a real danger, especially to children.

Overzealous vitamin enthusiasts frequently take many times the prescribed dose for the prevention of a deficiency which they may not even have had.

Most vitamins, unlike excessive doses of Vitamins A and D, are not toxic and are relatively safe even in large quantities.

Too much Vitamin D can cause severe toxic effects in adults and especially in infants.

Children and adults need about 400 USP units of Vitamin D for daily requirement. When a deficiency is known to exist, treatment demands between 500 USP and 1500 USP units a day.

Vitamin A is the other vitamin that can cause multiple symptoms when taken in excess. The normal daily requirements for it are 5,000 USP units. When a deficiency is known to exist by the doctor, replacement treatment can go up to 50,000 USP units in adults, to control the condition.

The amount of vitamins in any food is not sufficient to cause hypervitaminosis in anyone taking vitamins in prescribed or reasonable amounts.

Pupfish being nurtured; thought wiped out by man

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California scientists are acclaiming the return of a tiny desert fish thought for 20 years to be extinct but now flourishing in three carefully guarded pools.

"This is a success story in an otherwise generally gloomy picture," Almo J. Cordone, senior fishery biologist for the California Fish and Game Department, said Friday.

The Owens pupfish survived for eons in a changing environment — from a vast inland lake to a string of shallow desert pools where water temperatures may vary between freezing and 100 degrees — but it very nearly did not survive its brief contact with modern man.

The Owens pupfish — whose natural range was only about 70 miles along the bottom of the narrow Owens Valley, northwest of Death Valley — is less than two inches long. Males are irridescent blues and purples with black bars and fin edges. Females are a mottled brown.

They evolved from pupfish common in a prehistoric lake that covered much of the Death Valley-Southern Nevada desert.

Isolated in pools and streams as the big lake dried up, the pupfish became capable of living in both alkaline and saline waters and of surviving sharp temperature changes in the shallow pools of the desert. They feed on algae, plankton, insects and smaller fish.

Plentiful as recently as 50 years ago, the fish were virtually wiped out by the intrusion of modern man, who drained their habitats and introduced alien species of fish that ate both the pupfish's food and the pupfish.

The pupfish declined sharply during the 1920s and 1930s. In 1942, scientists were unable to find any more, and the little creatures were considered extinct until 1956, when several hundred were discovered in a pool fed by overflow from a spring-fed drainage ditch.

Hampshire Field Day held here

More than 200 Future Farmers and 4-H club members spent Saturday afternoon judging swine at the Ohio Hampshire Swine Breeders Association junior field day, which was one of the features of the state association's show and sale, at the Fairground here.

Boys and girls, along with their advisors, filled the show arena for the judging of five classes of Hampshire hogs and participated in the educational part of the program, which included type discussion, showing of films on the proper way to select project pigs, swine facilities, fitting and showmanship demonstrations, a panel discussion and other sidelights of interest to the young people.

SCOTT JENKS, Jeffersonville, of the Miami Trace FFA chapter, was the high individual. Bill Ebersoll, Eldorado, a member of National Trail FFA was second. Stu Shepard, Hamilton, a member of the Talawanda Chapter at Oxford, placed third. Jim McCoy, Bloomingburg, a Miami Trace FFA member was fourth. Placing fifth was Jim Landis, Lewisburg, also a member of the National Trail Chapter. David Hiser was sixth and Gary Taylor placed seventh; both are Miami Trace Future Farmers.

In the junior division Debbie Fry, Waynesville placed first. Mark Holloway, Bloomingburg, a member of the Blue Ribbon Champs 4-H Club placed second. Debbie Roll, Greenfield, a member of Concord Blue Ribbon 4-H was third. Placing fourth was Claire Huffman, a member of Central Colony 4-H Club from Powell. Jon Wilt, Washington C.H. placed fifth and Scott Anderson sixth; they are members of Wayne Progressive Farmers 4-H Club. Greg Wayland, Frankfort, a member of Concord Blue Ribbon placed seventh.

The National Trail FFA Chapter of Eaton placed first in the team division. Talawanda FFA of Oxford placed second and the Miami Trace FFA placed third and fourth. Miami Trace team members were Scott Jenks, Mike Coe and David Hiser, Jay Mossbarger, Gary Taylor and Paul Mitchell. Diane Gerber and Gerald Reid were members of the seventh place team.

The show of Hampshires was held at 5:30 p.m. with Lester Jordan Jr., U.S. 35, showing the champion boar which sold for $275 to a breeder at Urbana. The champion open gilt was shown by Don Gostomsky, Tipp City, and sold for $305. The top selling boar was consigned by David Runyan, Urbana, and sold for $300. The top bred gilt was consigned by Lester Jordan and sold for $425.

Bidding was active on the 30 project pigs that sold at auction at an average of $58 per head. Many of the young people who had won buying certificates earlier used their discount to buy these project pigs.

The sale totaled $11,365. Emerson Marting was the auctioneer.

Door company buys building from Marting

Sam B. Marting, president of the Marting Manufacturing Co., 809 Delaware St., announced Monday that the building housing the company's Ranger Division has been sold to William Black, Washington C. H., president of the Chappell Door Co., of Jeffersonville, Ind.

Black said the company which manufacturers interior and exterior flush doors will move its operations here later this year as soon as the building is vacated by the Ranger Division and is extensively remodeled to suit the needs of the Chappell Co. The work of remodeling the office already has been started.

The Ranger Division, Marting said, will continue operations in the present location, formerly the Kirk Stockyards, until the new building on Rose Avenue, which will adjoin the main manufacturing plant on the west, is completed.

Larceny reports, vandalism investigated over weekend

A variety of complaints including a burglary and several reported thefts kept city police busy over the weekend.

Someone entered the Certified Oil station, 225 W. Temple St., overnight Saturday and removed two cases of oil, a battery and other miscellaneous items, police reported.

Officers said the burglary was discovered by Raymond Daugherty when he opened for business Sunday morning. The burglar had entered through a rear door to the station, apparently using a key. Police said the door showed no sign of forced entery.

Loss was set at $45.

Eleven plastic bags of women's clothing, valued at $250, were stolen from a garage at the Greg Sowders residence, 1019 Rawling St., sometime during the past 10 days. Police said the lock on the door had been broken to gain entry.

City officers also investigated the theft of $30 from a safe at the Super Par station, 352 W. Court St., Sunday afternoon.

James Jarrell, station attendent, said a man in the station apparently had reached into the barrel-type drop safe and removed the money when Jarrell was outside pumping gas.

Two chrome valve covers were removed from the motor of a 1968 model car parked on the Don's Auto Sales used car lot Saturday night. Loss was set at $30.

Employes at the lot also reported that sometime Thursday night a light pole holding approximately 60 lights for the lot had been knocked down. The light bulbs and sockets were then crushed by the vandals. Damage was estimated at $60.

Girl, 4, injured in mower mishap

Sheriff's deputies said Annette G. Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ellis, Rt. 1, Mount Sterling, suffered a laceration on her back in the accident. She was released after treatment in the emergency room.

The girl was riding on the mower with her older brother when she fell off backwards and hit her back on the mower housing, sheriff's deputies said.

Dry cleaning blaze causes $200 damage

Damage was estimated at $200 to a cleaning machine at Sunshine Cleaners, 76 Washington Square, when it caught fire Saturday night.

Firemen said the blaze was doused with an extinguisher by Patrolman William Cales who was in the area at the time. The motor overheated when the machine was overloaded, firemen said.

Milledgeville-Octa Water proposal shelved by board

No further action is to be taken at this time on a proposal for a central water supply system in the Milledgeville and Octa area, according to a resolution approved Monday by the Fayette County Commissioners.

The resolution states that "sentiment was overwhelmingly against the establishment of such a central water supply system." It also states that petitions received from Milledgeville indicated approximately 65 per cent of the residents are in opposition to the system and there is little prospect for industrial growth in either Milledgeville or Octa in the forseeable future.

The Commissioners stated that a feasability study was prepared by the engineering firm of Helms and Associates and the results were presented at a public hearing March 1. Little sentiment was expressed at the hearing in favor of the system, according to the resolution. The Commissioners also said that the current water supply in the area appears to be adequate.

The proposed project included the Rattlesnake interchange of I-71 and U.S. 35, Milledgeville and Octa Villages.

POW repeats statements against war

NEW YORK (AP) — Navy Capt. Walter Eugene Wilber says the anti-war statements he made while a prisoner of war in North Vietnam were the result of his conscience.

"I was not tortured," Wilber said in an interview on the CBS "60 Minutes" program Sunday night.

Asked why he changed his mind about the war after his capture, he said:

"I happen to be a Christian. I happen to be a professional naval officer. I happen to love my wife and children very much. I happen to love my country very much ...

"I found out that when I had time to think about myself, where I was, what we were doing, I found out that my conscience bothered me."

Wilber has rejoined his wife and three children at their remote Columbia Cross Roads home in the rolling hills of Pennsylvania's Bradford County.

POW leader recalls brutal Hanoi march

By Capt. Jeremiah A. Denton Jr., USN
As told to Kathryn Johnson
Associated Press Writer

I'd like to take you to the Hanoi March. A night of brutal spectacle, with the population having at us as we went through the streets and a night in which many men were tortured for confessions at the Hilton and the Zoo.

The North Vietnamese frustration and indignation against what our country was doing and what the POWs were doing, and not doing, reached a peak in the summer of 1966.

It was a year of terror tactics against the entire mass of POWs rather than against groups or individuals as later.

They were getting not only biographies but confessions from many men in their anger and I believe in an effort to intimidate American actions in the war by proffering us as hostages.

They began to threaten war crime trials. This pitch of indignation reached its highest form of expression during the Hanoi March.

Late in the afternoon of July 6, we heard many doors opening in the camp and a number of us were taken to several large rooms, blindfolded and handcuffed in pairs. Although many guards were watching us, we were able to communicate names by whispering to one another and by tapping on the adjacent man's knee or thigh.

My partner was Bob Peel, who is a very brave young man. It was the first time I was that close to an American, of course, and somehow I sensed the North Vietnamese were about to make some sort of spectacular display that would redound to their disadvantage.

They gave us a lecture in which they were vague about what we were going to do that evening but did let us know they were going to take a trip and strongly warned against communicating. One of the officers screamed at us that if we communicated on the trip, we'd be killed.

We were told we would be paraded through the streets so the people could demonstrate their anger to us. My over-all impression of their aim at this time is that they planned a spectacle which would humiliate us.

We were unloaded downtown and lined up in columns on a main street, about 10 yards between pairs. Right in front of me was one of several trucks loaded with news correspondents, big still cameras and big movie cameras.

Before we started moving and as the cameras began to roll, I tried my best to look as unrepentant as I could.

I unbuttoned to look carefree. I made an obscene gesture toward the crowd.

At that point one of the guards told Bob and me, "You will have to bow your heads."

Suddenly I comprehended the whole idea. So I shouted an order up ahead: "Nobody bows his head. Pass the word."

And I turned and shouted the same thing to the pair behind me.

I believe that I'm not the only one who gave that order but I gave it. I'm pretty sure the order was passed throughout.

The march began. The people were screaming. I think they were screaming something like, "kowtow, kowtow."

We did not bow our heads.

The army's part in this was to simply bend us through the street at bayonet point and afford the proper expression of subjugation and repentance.

As the march progressed, we began to tire and sweat profusely, having had no recent, comparable exercise. The crowd was standing about 15 deep on each side of the street and the heat from all the bodies was tremendous.

The big object of the parade was to bow our heads as we went through the streets.

As far as I could see no heads bowed, but if any did I think it was from sheer fatigue and not intimidation.

The crowd became thicker and more intense. One woman — I'd judge her age at about 50 — threw a big rock at me from behind. We were frequently hit by guards and our faces, lips, jaws and foreheads were bleeding.

The next time a woman threw a rock, she successfully connected and knocked me off my feet.

They kept pulling us by the ears. I knew they were making asses of themselves.

The most irritating part of the march was a man about eight inches shorter than I, who would break through the cordon, sneak up and give me a left hook in the groin.

I practiced throwing a one-two punch at him, counting one, two, three,

Tornadoes, floods hit Deep South

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Flood conditions worsened today along the rain-swollen Mississippi River and in the South, where torrential rains accompanied by tornadoes battered portions of two states during the weekend.

Snow was still piling up in the Southwest, and strong winds whipped sandstorms in southwestern areas not hit by the snow.

Heavy snow warnings were posted for the mountains of southwest and central Colorado, central and western Arizona and New Mexico. More than a foot of new snow fell Sunday in Utah.

Fair weather prevailed from the mid-Atlantic coast west to the southern Plains and over most of California.

In Alton, Ill., the Mississippi swirled through downtown streets. Spokesmen for the Army Corps of Engineers expressed fear Sunday night that levees, soaked to the core, might give way as waters rise on the Mississippi, Missouri and Meramec rivers.

The cleanup from Saturday night's tornadoes was going on beside flood preparation today in portions of Georgia and South Carolina. The twisters, which struck before National Weather Service radar could spot them, inflicted severe property damage and claimed at least eight lives.

Govs. John West of South Carolina and Jimmy Carter of Georgia surveyed the damage by air Sunday. Both said they would seek federal disaster funds. In Georgia, an estimated 5,000 persons were left homeless by the storm.

The Pee Dee River at Cheraw, S.C., was expected to reach a crest of 15 feet above bank level early today, and the Rocky River at Norwood, S.C., was 23 feet above flood stage Sunday.

High winds in Fairfax County, Va., near Washington, drove 76 families from their homes, caused heavy damages at at least 16 stores and forced the closing today of a school.

Republican Senate offices said bugged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican member of the Senate Watergate investigating committee says two GOP senators were among targets of spies working for President Nixon's re-election last year.

That and other statements alleging political espionage by the Committee for the Re-election of the President were made Sunday by Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., and denounced by a spokesman for the Nixon committee as "absolutely, categorically, undeniably" false.

Weicker said also he believes White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman was so closely involved with the Committee for the Re-election of the President that he "had to know what was going on," in the way of political espionage.

He said Republican campaign aides were "almost competitive as to who could do the dirtiest deed." Weicker said he had been told by Alfred C. Baldwin that office activities of Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., were among those marked for surveillance.

Baldwin, a former FBI agent, has testified he was hired to wiretap Democratic telephone calls.

Weicker said Baldwin told him he had been ordered by convicted Watergate burglar James W. McCord to stake out those offices and several others on Capitol Hill.

Baldwin, he said, had been told to watch the comings and goings from the offices of Sens. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.; Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine; William Proxmire, D-Wis.; Mike Gravel, D-Alaska; and Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y.

Weicker said this surveillance was on the "exhibition schedule" of the alleged spies leading to what he called the main event: Bugging Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office building and spying on Democratic leaders at the party's convention in Miami Beach, Fla.

He said the June 17 arrests inside the Watergate foiled plans laid for that weekend to break into the presidential campaign headquarters of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and to fly to Miami to bug the telephones of Democratic Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien and other party leaders.

Move protests high prices

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Spaghetti, macaroni, chicken and seafood topped the Sunday dinner menus for thousands of Americans on the opening day of a week-long meat boycott protesting high prices.

Most meat markets were closed on Sunday, so it was hard to judge whether housewives were crossing beef, lamb and pork off their shopping lists.

President Nixon announced last Thursday night that a ceiling on the price of all beef, pork, and lamb was to go into effect today. But leaders of consumer groups said the boycott would be held anyway because the ceiling would not be effective.

Although some New York restaurants reported patrons asking for more meatless dishes than usual, a spot check of restaurants in the Chicago area showed most restaurants doing a booming business.

"Right now we've got a waiting line of 20 minutes, and I've seen a lot of steaks going by," said Frieda Marianos, service manager at a Chicago restaurant where the best steak costs $7.50.

"We've been selling chicken, that's all," said Cheri Killingsworth, a meat clerk at a Detroit food store. An assistant manager at another chain store agreed that it was "really bad."

Joining the ranks of meat boycotters in Michigan was the Rainbow People's party, formerly known as the White Panther party. A party spokesman explained, "Meat prices are criminal, and we're in favor of all political action like this."

Dolly Cole, wife of the president of General Motors, said her family wasn't boycotting meat. She added, "But I really don't think we have steak more than once every two weeks or so."

Mrs. Cole said she cut up a leftover rump roast to make hash for Sunday dinner. She said, "We like hash."

In Waterville, Maine, Pat Gorman served her family of nine a macaroni loaf made with cheese, macaroni, tuna fish, evaporated milk, onions, eggs and pimentoes. Mrs. Gorman, who helped organize the Maine boycott, said, "My husband likes spicier foods, but the kids loved it."

She said that she has received about 200 telephone calls from women throughout the state who wanted to organize a meatless protest in their areas.

A housewife passing out meatless recipes at a Columbia, Mo., food store Saturday was upstaged by a group of 16 cattlemen who bought the store out of meat and then gave it away to surprised customers.

"We wanted people to see what it would be like to go into a store and not be able to buy meat because it wasn't there," said Jim Marshall, a spokesman for the cattlemen.

Mrs. Marilyn Johnson, the housewife, said shoppers were taking her recipes for salmon souffle, chopstick tuna, rosy cheese fondue and other meatless dishes until the ranchers started handing out free meat.

"I kept telling the customers that free meat is nice, but that it won't be free next week," she said.

CAMPAIGN CHALLENGE — The city clean-up campaign is now in its second stage, according to City Manager Dan Wolford. The voluntary stage of the campaign ended Saturday, and now personal contacts are being made by the building inspector and policemen where violators exist. Violators of the city refuse ordinance who did not clean up their properties during the voluntary stage of the campaign are now being asked personally to correct the situation. Persons who ignore the requests will be subject to prosecution, according to Wolford. The Delaware Street property shown here is littered with wood, tin cans, lawnmowers, chairs, a toaster and various other items, and is one of the targets of the campaign to create an "atmosphere for progress." The News In Brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today let stand a lower court decision blocking construction of the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

The high court refused without comment or dissent an urgent government plea to overturn the lower court. Thus, the justices left the future of the pipeline from Alaska's North Slope up to Congress.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Gen. Kent Frizzell, the government's chief negotiator, told a news conference Sunday that "a consensus" had been reached at that day's session on more than half of 10 Indian demands.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survivor of North Vietnamese captivity says he believes more than 100 U.S. airmen were killed by angry militiamen and civilians after their planes were shot down.

"Well over 100 men were seen on the ground alive but never reached the prison system," Air Force Col. James H. Kasler said in an interview.

"We know that in the bombed areas an awful lot of men were killed by the militia. The North Vietnamese civilians were pretty irate."

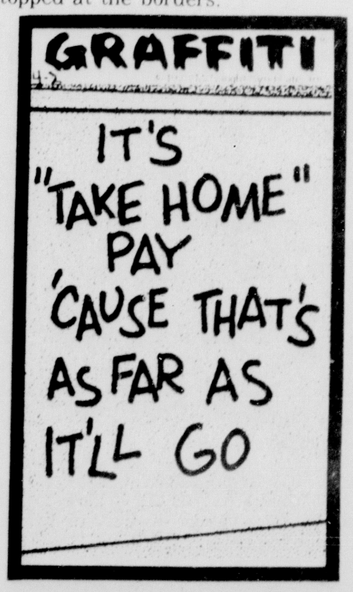
STOCKHOLM (AP) — With the withdrawal of American combat troops from Vietnam, the Swedish government says it will no longer automatically grant asylum to U.S. military deserters. But it will continue to protect those already in the country.

There are some 450 American deserters and draft dodgers currently in Sweden. Kjell Oeberg, general director of the Swedish Immigration Board, said Sunday new ones will be stopped at the borders.



Many Ohioans join meat boycott

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The meat boycott is on nationwide and food store operators in Ohio are standing back, waiting to see what happens as family shoppers choose menus from non-meat sources.

The boycott is being used in an attempt to force meat prices down, but store managers for the most part in Ohio say they'll be going ahead with regular meat advertising.

Jim Flay, manager of Liberal Food Market in the Cincinnati suburb of Price Hill said he would be monitoring meat sales.

"I'm concerned about it, let's put it like that," said Ed Burns, Columbus area food chain manager.

Leaders of the boycott said they would continue to select poultry and fish over meat despite President Nixon's price ceiling on beef, pork and lamb, imposed last week.

Mrs. Cynthia Parker, a member of a Columbus "Fight Inflation Together" group said she planned to serve "a lot of fish and processed meats" to her family this week.

"I think 99 per cent of the women are supporting the boycott either actively or in their own homes," she said. She also said the Columbus group plans to hold an "After the Boycott" meeting April 10 to give housewives a chance to meet with farmers, meat packers and retailers to discuss the effects of the boycott.

Mrs. Dreama Thomas of Grove City said she did not buy any fresh meat for her four-member family when she did her shopping for this week. And she said she spent only $37 on food, compared with the $60 spent the previous week.

In Dayton, two housewives in FOOD (Families to Overcome Outrageous Demands) said they would be distributing leaflets at local food stores urging shoppers to buy meat substitutes.

The president of the Columbus Building Trades Council, John Scales, said his members support the boycott, which he said was aimed at large corporations that are "much more able to maintain price controls in food than the little farmer, who historically has been in a poor position in American society in purchasing power."

"We are not," he contended, "chastising the farmer."

Food prices high in foreign nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sirloin steak out of sight these days? It's rough all over, according to U.S. emissaries who checked supermarket prices in Bonn, London, Tokyo, Rome and other foreign capitals.

Beef roasts sold for $2.08 per pound in the West German capital in mid-March, about the same as in Washington.

And if misery truly loves company Japan's finest—Kobe beef—was selling to a limited clientele in Tokyo for $17.40 per pound.

The foreign meat prices were reported today by the Agriculture Department in its weekly publication, "Foreign Agriculture." Officials said spot checks were made of prices in 11 cities by U.S. agricultural attaches.

T-bone steak was reported at 85 cents per pound in Brasilia and veal cutlets at 67 cents. In Washington, the report said, sirloin was $1.69 and veal $2.29.

Parisian shoppers saw top round of beef at $2.57 per pound and veal escalope at $3.20, the report said. In Stockholm, porterhouse steak was $3.81 per pound and veal cutlets $2.82.

Sirloin in London stores was $1.88 per pound, with rump steak going for $2.25 to disgruntled housewives where rising food prices have fed labor-union strife.

Bacon, currently about $1.19 per pound here, was bringing 96 cents in Brussels. Pork loin in Washington was $1.29 and in Tokyo it was $2.25.

Brazil had the lowest price for lamb chops, 58 cents per pound, compared with $2.19 here, $2 in Rome, $2.49 in Brussels, and $1.98 in Stockholm.

Poultry as an alternative? Broiler chicken, at 65 cents a pound in Washington, was priced at $1.67 in Tokyo; 48 cents in The Hague; $1 in Stockholm; 63 to 71 cents in Rome; 64 cents in Ottawa, where Canadians also paid $1.68 for sirloin steak, $1.32 for pork loin, and 99 cents for imported leg of lamb; and 62 cents in Bonn.

Nixon meets with Thieu

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon is expected to assure South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu of continued American aid when the two meet today at the Western White House.

Although U.S. officials often have briefed newsmen prior to such conferences, White House sources were reluctant to discuss topics for the meetings before Thieu's arrival.

However, observers expect discussion of Nixon's repeated warnings that Communist violations of the cease-fire agreement could produce American military reprisals.

After arriving in a chartered Air Vietnam jetliner at Los Angeles International Airport on Sunday, Thieu's only comment to newsmen was: "I came to say thanks to the American people."

A communique is to be issued after the last of their four meetings on Tuesday, and few observers expect it to contain any substantive surprises. They think it will have pledges of solidarity, promises of U.S. aid to South Vietnam, vows of adherence to the cease-fire agreement and a statement that North Vietnam and the Viet Cong are expected to do the same.

Meat boycott has little effect here

A spot check with managers of local food markets Monday morning disclosed little in the way of the effect of a meat boycott in Washington C. H.

Most managers felt it was too early to tell if the boycott would reduce their meat sales. Some said they thought the boycott would not seriously affect stores in this area.

Developer may double space

Washington Square expansion planned

The developer of the Washington Square Shopping Center said Monday that he expects to "at least double" the size of the complex at Columbus Avenue and Elm Street within the next nine months to a year.

William H. Hadler, Columbus real estate executive, disclosed that plans call for a new wing which should increase floor space "probably by more than 100 per cent". Hadler said he has been negotiating with a number of prospective tenants but that it is too early to make a formal announcement.

The Shopping Center's 16th tenant, a Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. service store, is expected to open for business within the next four months. Footers have been poured for the 6,000-square-foot brick structure on the front of the Shopping Center property facing the CCC Highway. The Rathburn Construction Co., of Shadyside, holds the contract for the four-bay center.

"We feel that this new business will complement the present center", Hadler said.

As he followed along in the crowd, I got the escort officer's attention, I pointed to the man and demonstrated my intention and ability to deliver the one-two punch if he came out again.

This was sort of a moment of truth for the officer. He visibly paled, then made his decision.

The officer ran over to the man who was still trailing me, grabbed him by the shirt, shook him hard several times, shouted at him and I think he slapped him in the face. The man didn't give us any more trouble after that.

The crowd overflowed into the street more and more until we had a path no wider than a pair of streetcar tracks. People were able to pummel us. The cameras had long ago disappeared.

We made a left turn to the soccer stadium. The path was a 45-degree turn where the crowd was solidly massed.

I could see one or two pairs of prisoners fighting their way through, sometimes crawling, often kicking and punching.

At this point in that parade I did feel fear. I thought we might be mashed.

It was like fighting for 15 yards in a football game with no rules. We were fighting the enraged people, and the thing was now out of hand. Bob and I finally got to the stadium.

Once inside, with no crowd left, the army men seemed even more relieved than we were. They jabbered and smiled among themselves while we seized the chance to talk among ourselves.

On the way back in the truck, I was talking to Bobby Risner and I missed a danger signal, a cough. A guard knocked me not unconscious but momentarily senseless.

Back in my cell at the Zoo, I thought the eventful evening was over but suddenly an officer came to my door and told me in a kindly way that I'd better drink some water. I did and a guard took me out to a tree, blindfolded me and gagged me with two rags that had been used to bind my sandals. The rags were filthy and full of grit.

He then cuffed my hands behind me and around the tree. I thought I was one of three persons bound to trees.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Cloudy skies and scattered showers will persist throughout Ohio today, the National Weather Service reported.

Showers were expected to continue over northern counties tonight and Tuesday, with cloudiness breaking up elsewhere in the state.

A low pressure trough stretching from southern Lake Michigan to central New York was forecast to bring cooler air into Indiana and Ohio.

Some precipitation was recorded Sunday evening, including .41 inches at Youngstown and a little over one-tenth of an inch at Findlay. Other cities recorded lesser amounts.

Area students enrolled at Bowling Green State University named to the dean's scholastic honors list for the winter quarter are Denise Kay Bowshier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Bowshier, of Mount Sterling; Cynthia Elizabeth Carty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy H. Carty, of London, and Gary Lee Bailey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard D. Bailey, of Leesburg.

All made an average of 4.00. Bailey is a junior and both girls are seniors at the university.

Stock list down again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued today the selling pattern it followed last Friday, and analysts attributed the decline to the same, old factors: concern over inflation and rising interest rates.

At noon the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had dropped 4.44 points to 946.57. Declines held almost a 7 to 4 lead over advances in lackluster trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The broad-based NYSE index of some 1,400 common stocks was down .32 to 59.26 at noon.

Eldon A. Grimm of Walston & Co. said the Supreme Court's refusal today to overturn a lower court construction ban on the trans-Alaska pipeline "certainly didn't help" the market.

ITT chairman testifies

WASHINGTON (AP) — ITT board chairman Harold S. Geneen testifies today before a Senate subcommittee trying to find out why the company attempted to channel $1 million through the U.S. government into Chile in 1970.

The Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on multi-national corporations has received conflicting accounts about the purpose of the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. offer during the campaign of Childean President Salvador Allende.

John A. McCone, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency and now an ITT director, testified March 21 that Geneen sent him to Washington in September 1970 to inform high government officials that ITT was ready to contribute up to $1 million "in support of any government plan for the purpose of bringing about a coalition of opposition to Allende."

Final American POW suffering from malaria

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the Philippines, the last known American prisoner of war was suffering from a slight case of malaria today that may delay his return home to home soil by a day.

In California, a recently freed POW, Air Force Lt. Col. Louis H. Bernasconi, gathered his mother and 14-year-old daughter into his arms and wept for joy Sunday as the crowd cheered thunderously and sang "God Bless America."

In Massachusetts, freed POW Air Force Maj. Fernando Alexander told a welcoming crowd: "We traveled almost halfway around the world today. Thank God it was all the way home."

In Texas, ex-POW Capt. William A. Spencer arriving home said: "It's nice to be in the land of the Stars and Stripes and Playboy magazine and those kinds of things."

Army Capt. Robert T. White, the last American to be released by the Communists, was limping when he arrived Sunday at Clark Air Base in the Philippines for processing. He was liberated by the Viet Cong in the Mekong Delta, where his light observation plane had been shot down.

Doctors at Clark today described his condition after his first sleep in freedom since 1969 as satisfactory, but said he was being treated for a slight case of malaria.

The 32-year-old Newport News, Va., pilot had been expected to fly home Wednesday for a reunion with his wife, Judith, but doctors said his return home might be delayed until Thursday.

See stabilized park system

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a century of expansion, it may be time to begin "stabilizing" the National Park System, says its new director, Ronald Walker.

The Park Service may eventually acquire selected new areas to "round out" its holdings, Walker said, but at present he is putting more emphasis on improving parks already within the system.

The difficult task of creating and improving parks in and near large population centers of the east, where the National Park Service now has relatively little land, should be pursued mainly by state and local governments, Walker said.

He said the National Park Service would help with advice and counseling.

Walker outlined his views in his first interview since taking office two months ago.

A former presidential advance-man with no previous experience in park management, Walker said he was still learning about the park service and its problems.

Walker expressed admiration for the expertise gained by his predecessor, George L. Hartzog Jr., who has worked in the Interior Department for 26 years and headed the National Park Service for nine years before President Nixon assigned Walker to replace him.

He said he planned to continue and expand some of the programs started experimentally by Hartzog, to cope with increasingly heavy pressures on the parks from a growing population.

But Walker said it was time to "take a step back now and see where we're going."

He said the master plans prepared years ago for the existing national parks were all being reviewed to update them.

Q—"The President's 1974 budget seeks a $50 million increase in national park funding. How will the money be used?"

A—"The budget is to help us in the new areas ...it was not there before, to do anything with these new areas: the Gateway East (New York-New Jersey), Gateway West (San Francisco), Buffalo River, portions of Cumberland Gap ..nd other areas.

"The rest of it is going for upgrading of facilities. They have had a great deal of difficulty in the past bringing these facilities up to the standard that could and should be there for the visiting public."

Q—"What kind of services need improvement?"

A—"The displays in the visitor centers, for example. Some of them are ten or 15 years old. Sure, they still tell the story, but in some cases nature has taken its course and some changes have resulted.

"Roads, trails, with the visitation that the National Park Service is experiencing. There's been a 99 per cent increase since 1964 in visitation and a 19 per cent increase in National Park Service personnel.

"Also, we have 298 areas, some of which I'd never heard of. I just feel it's incumbent upon us to let people know that, look, you may not have to drive all the way across the United States of America; you may have a tremendous experience within 100, 200, 300 miles where you have facilities where you could camp; and, hopefully alleviate what has been in the past tremendous traffic jams (in more famous parks)."

Q—"Have any decisions been made about restricting the number of visitors or cars in the parks?"

A—"No, we don't anticipate that, going into this season.

"Transportation (by private car) on the floor of Yosemite has been stopped for a couple of years and apparently it worked very well."

Clues are sought in Cincinnati to blast fatal to 7; 15 hurt

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Arson investigators today sifted through the debris of an explosion that killed seven and injured 15 Saturday night.

Asst. Fire Chief Robert Schinaman said Sunday night that the debris was being moved to a vacant lot for examination.

Officials said they hoped to learn what caused the gas leak that apparently triggered the blast.

Two crane shovels were removing the debris from three buildings and loading it into city trucks for the transfer. Workmen were also seeking a possible eighth body.

Five of the victims were believed to have been in a rear room at Clara and Al's Cafe at the time of the blast.

Mary Goode, who lived on the first floor, was on the telephone to the Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co. to report the smell of natural gas at the time of the explosion.

Her husband, Jesse, who accompanied her to the tavern telephone, was killed when he stepped into the kitchen.

Bartender John W. Johnson, 42, and his friends, William Pagano, 71; Lawrence Stewart, 40; Francis Puckett, and Jack Froman, 39, also died in the blast.

Also killed was Pearl Martin, 72, who, according to Mrs. Goode, was a bedridden invalid.

"I don't know whether I was still holding the telephone or not," said Mrs. Goode, describing her rescue by firemen. They found her protected by floor joists in the basement.

She said she and her husband moved into the building four months ago and didn't know many of the people. Jesse worked as a presser for a dry cleaning company.

Mrs. Goode said both were asleep but were awakened by the smell of gas. He checked out their apartment and found nothing, so they went into the bar to report it.

"I called CG&E," she said, "and I told the woman and she transferred me to somebody else. Just after I finished talking...it happened."

She said she remembers nothing from then until she was found. "I didn't hear anything but me yelling," she recalled. She spent Sunday in a nearby motel.

Returnee lashes protesters for keeping Viet War going

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — Army S. Sgt. William S. Baird, who spent almost five years as a prisoner-of-war in North Vietnam, says antiwar demonstrations kept POWS from returning home sooner.

Baird, 23, said Saturday that if antiwar protestors " hadn't raised so much hell and made so many demonstrations, we'd have been home earlier."

"I think the Vietnam War was justified," said Baird. "We were sent there to do a job and did it. If I had to do it again, I would."

Baird, who is partially paralyzed in his lower legs and has internal injuries, returned home Saturday for a welcoming parade. He is on 10 days leave from Valley Forge General Hospital in Phoenixville, Pa.

Baird said his injuries stemmed from gunshot wounds inflicted at the time of his capture. He said the injuries robbed him of bladder and bowel control.

Army Spec. 5 Steve Sutton, who drove Baird home, refused to let the Wooster native answer questions related to prisoner torture, amnesty and U.S. aid to North Vietnam.

However, Baird did tell reporters that he was "shot when I was captured and ... handcuffed to a bed for four or five days."

"They thought I wasn't telling the truth," said Baird, "and they pointed a pistol at me several times because I refused to listen to propaganda and I refused to get off my bed.

"I received very little medical treatment from the Communists," said Baird. "They saved my life, but what little they did was very poor."

Baird was released March 5, after 4 years and 10 months as a prisoner.

He said the POWs heard "anything that had to do with people against the war."

"We heard the Communist side of it. I did not believe it, but there was nothing else to read," Baird said.

Baird said nearly all the prisoners with him "were originally listed as missing in action."

"But I don't think there are any more there," he said "I think everyone's out now."

Opposition to North Viet aid growing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed U.S. aid to North Vietnam is being attacked anew as returned prisoners of war tell stories of torture and mistreatment at the hands of their captors.

The stories "convince me that not a cent of American aid money should be spent on rehabilitating a country that is apparently run by savages," said Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, R-Va.

He and Conservative Sen. James L. Buckley of New York issued statements Sunday about President Nixon's plans to ask Congress for aid to North Vietnam as "an investment in peace."

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield also referred to the accounts by the former prisoners in saying that he had not changed his mind that the aid to Hanoi would help keep the peace.

"Even before this it looked difficult," the Montana Democrat said. He said he did not know what effect the stories will have on Congress.

Buckley issued a statement urging President Nixon to "carefully reconsider any proposal for economic assistance to North Vietnam in light of the POW reports on treatment and prison conditions."

Boycott of meat taken seriously

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Police in Lorain said they're looking for a man they believe has carried the meat price protest a bit too far.

Police said the manager of a local Ponderosa Steak House reported receiving several calls from a man who threatened to kill all the restaurant's employes because they were not observing the national meat boycott.

Probe explosion at night spot; thought dynamite

Police speculated the explosion, which caused an estimated $2,000 to the inside of the building alone, might have been caused by sticks of dynamite thrown from a passing car.

Police Chief Wayne Constant said it might be a "wild guess," but said it appeared that "someone who just passed by" had thrown one or two sticks of dynamite onto the roof.

No injuries were reported. The one-story brick night spot was unoccupied at the time of the blast.

Good news on seals, whales

The news on a recent day included two items of heartening import to conservationists. Both originated from Washington. The National Marine Fisheries Service report the highest count of gray whales off the California coast since it began the count six years ago.

An agreement with Canada, Japan and the Soviet Union to suspend the harvesting of fur seals on St. George Island in the Pribilof group off Alaska was announced by the Department of Commerce.

Both the seals and whales are species which have occasioned particular concern. The gray whale is listed by the government as an endangered species. The fur seal is of interest to both conservationists and persons disturbed by the club-and-knife slaughtering method commonly used.

It is good to learn, thus, that this winter's gray whale count was more than 400 above that in 1971-72 , and almost 200 higher than the number recorded in the 1967-68 count. Though weather, viewing conditions and other factors have a bearing on this, the latest total does fairly indicate that the gray whale is at least holding its own.

As for the seals, experts are worried because they find that in the past three years there have been "unexplained downward trends in the male population despite careful management . . ." The long-run in this, were the trend to continue, is evident.

To learn more about the causes of this decline, scientists will compare the seal population on St. George Island with that on nearby St. Paul Island where the taking of fur seals will be permitted to continue.

This will naturally not satisfy those who favor an absolute ban on the taking of seals for their fur. The international agreement and related study of the seal population is a noteworthy start, however, on more judicious management of a valued animal species.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . by John P. Roche

Watergate: an idiotic episode

The more we learn about the Watergate affair, the more puzzled we become. By "we" I mean those of us who have spent a good deal of time inside Presidential politics.

Putting aside the interesting conflict between the Administration's devotion to law and order (to say nothing of the "work ethic") and the sequence of events which has led the Acting Director of the F.B.I. to accuse the President's counsel of lying to an agent, what kind of characters would have authorized and lavishly financed that idiotic episode?

The answer that immediately comes to mind is that the Watergate break-in and bugging could only have been sponsored by men who knew less about national politics than I do about astrophysics.

Indeed, were it not for the intrinsic seriousness of actions which undermine the credibility of our political system, the Watergate caper resembled a fraternity prank. It was simply asinine both in conception and execution.

FOR THIS REASON I have been convinced from the outset that President Nixon was totally unaware of the scenario. Richard Nixon did not become representative, senator, vice president, and finally President of the United States through his non-political talents. I think, perhaps naively, and he, and every other candidate for President of the United States in my time, would have blocked it instantly on moral grounds.

But beyond that, he would be fully aware of the inherent stupidity of even a successful bugging of the office of Lawrence O'Brien, then the Democratic national chairman.

O'Brien grew up in what might be called the "original sin" school of politics — Joseph P. Kennedy Sr., dean; Kenneth O'Donnell, student advisor. The first rule one learned in this school was always to assume the worst case: for instance, take for granted the existence of opposition spies in your midst, figure that somebody has bugged the headquarters, and that the phones are tapped. (Not by the FBI, the C.I.A., or any official agency, but by private electronic experts.)

As a consequence of this, any real political business was invariable conducted well outside the office. One would call O'Brien about some ticklish political matter and simply say, "Larry, I think we ought to have a talk. Why don't I drop by in half an hour?"

Arriving at his office in the Watergate, you would remark on what a lovely day it was and suggest a walk. And as you ambled along the bank of the Potomac, you would get down to business.

I AM SURE that the Republicans, that is, the real professionals, operate on roughly the same set of assumptions. This sort of atmosphere does have a "chilling effect," but one adapts to it quickly. It is not really comparable to the environment of a "police state"; anybody with some knowledge of electronics and $25 can get in the bugging business, and the police are, in my judgment, minimal offenders.

The Watergate operation was, in other words, a political Amateur Hour. And the reason it obviously received support from White House personnel is that the Nixon White House is staffed with political amateurs.

Nobody in Mr. Nixon's top echelon has ever been elected tree warden (an office on our Massachusetts ballot last month) and they look like the boys from Delta Sigma Chi.

But Watergate was not a fraternity prank. One cannot with impunity tamper with the electoral process, and any efforts by the White House to cover up staff involvement must be ruthlessly disposed of.

The doctrine of Executive Privilege may frustrate a congressional committee, but it cuts no ice with a grand jury.

Bribe to Hanoi needn't be blackmail

Frankly, the only reason to give the North Vietnamese a nickel would be to bribe them to keep the peace. This is an admittedly ignoble reason, but it appeals to the practical streak in many Americans who have no love for Communists of any stripe.

There is Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, for example. Strom, who is as much of an anti-Communist hardliner as any man in the Senate, says he is "essentially opposed to giving aid to North Vietnam." But he adds that "we must keep an open mind on the subject, based on practical considerations and the necessary safeguards." The "practical considerations" are that Hanoi, once it gets the money, will stay bribed and will not spend the funds on rebuilding its warmaking machinery.

Although I hate to say it, I find myself going along with Thurmond's rather schizoid position. The North Vietnamese don't deserve a cent; indeed, they ought to be compelled to give reparations to the South Vietnamese, the Loatians, and the Cambodians. But if a bribe will work, lives will be spared.

SOME of my good friends in the American Conservative Union say they are "unalterably opposed to aid to North Vietnam." And they quote House Minority Leader Gerald Ford's 1965 statement that "friendship, security and solid international relations cannot be bought with dollars." M. Stanton Evans, the ACU chairman, in supporting the position of his organization, recalls the experience the ancient Saxons had when they raised the famous Danegeld tax to buy off the Danish despoilers of Britain's North Sea coast. The Danes took the money, but it didn't stop them from renewing the raids. It was Rudyard Kipling who wrote that "once you have paid him the Dane-Geld you never get rid of the Dane."

The Kipling line applies to almost all blackmail situations. But, like Sen. Thurmond, I question the completeness of any anaolgy that would cast the North Vietnamese as modern collectors of a Danegeld. The Danes came back to ravish the British coast for the good and sufficient reason that the Saxons lacked the physical power to stop them. A "Dangegeld" apid to Hanoi, however, would be designed to give the South Vietnamese, not involved in the bribe, time to strengthen their defenses, to learn how to operate a modern air force, and to contain any North Vietnamese encamped south of the demilitarized zone.

The bribe would be in the nature of a holding operation. If it didn't work, there would be nothing to keep the Nixon Administration from denouncing Hanoi and mining anew the port of Haiphong. If the ancient Saxons had had the equivalent of the B-52s, their Danegeld tax might have been a one-shot affair. It would have deprived Rudyard Kipling of a brave and ringing poetic line, but, given the requisite will on the part of the Saxons, it would have stopped raids on the North Sea shores.

WHEN I SAY I am for offering Hanoi the bribe to keep the peace, I do so under one condition: I would, at the moment the money is delivered, give the Saigon government some bombing planes with sufficient range to reach the North Vietnamese dikes in the Red River delta. It would be thoroughly understood that if the North Vietnamese used the money to rebuild their war machine and started moving men and equipment over the Ho Chi Minh trail into South Vietnam, we would look the other way while Saigon drowned Hanoi's aagricultural economy. With the South Vietnamese in a good position to stop the North Vietnamese Gen. Giap by inundating his rear, the Danegeld analogy would break down completely.

All of this talk about bribing Hanoi to keep the peace will probably come to naught anyway. The North Vietnamese obviously do not intend to withdraw from Laos and Cambodia, and they will almost certainly continue to wage some form of warfare in the sections of South Vietnam they now occupy. With the war continuing, it is hardly likely that Hanoi will get a penny out of the U.S. Senate, and Sen. Thurmond won't have to worry about the morality of his split position.

Letters To The Editor

EDITOR, RECORD-HERALD:

Last Tuesday we the undersigned individuals, together with the Rev. Elmer Burrall, attended another in a series of meetings with the Mid Ohio Regional Planning Commission.

We are talking about a Central Ohio Planning Area, created by executive order of Gov. Gilligan, involving Franklin County, the six counties adjoining Frankling, and Fayette — eight counties total.

This is a planning agency for these eight counties. The scope of their thinking is indicated when we examine the suggested areas of planning which have been mentioned in literature disseminated by the MORPC itself. These areas are: Highway Systems, air and rail facilities, mass transportation, water resource development, sanitary sewage systems, solid waste disposal, air quality, environmental quality, parts and recreational facilities, major open space, agriculture, minerals and quarries, market analysis, development of housing standards, strategy for supplying regional housing needs, law enforcement, fire protection, civil defense, disaster prevention, economic and job development policies, clearinghouse for job and development data, impact of job development activities, calalyst for public and private agencies, technical assistance, formulate and coordinate programs for human resource development, social service programs in the region, public education, private and parochial, higher education, technical and vocational.

It was suggested the functional areas of concern of the MORPC include, but not be limited to the above-mentioned areas.

The time has come, in the thinking of this planning agency that a number of basic matters must be considered. Those discussed and acted upon last Tuesday were (1) Approval of a letter to Gov. Gilligan requesting him to implement this planning group into a legal entity by executive order, (2) discussion and inclusion in the minutes of the study group four suggested formulas for distribution of the voting strength among the eight counties.

In connection with the legalizing of the planning group it was suggested that enabling legislation would be in order, thus bringing the state legislature into the act.

In regard to the four suggested formulas for distribution of voting strength among the eight counties let us briefly add this further explanation. Three of the formulas would provide Franklin with sufficient voting strength (about 48 per cent) which, with the aid of only one other county, would enable them to control all the action of the planning group. Under these three plans Fayette would be granted about 6 per cent of the voting strength. The fourth formula would provide Franklin with sufficient voting strength, which with the aid of two additional counties, would enable them to control the action of the planning group. The Fayette County representatives suggested another alternative but were ignored.

Regarding finances no official action was taken but literature was distributed which suggested this matter could be handled by a per capita assessment on the population of the planning area on a county by county basis.

No figure was mentioned but it was suggested this would depend on the size of the staff involved.

Even before taking your blood pressure your doctor can predict it within three points.

The insurance company writes you a letter and tells you that your policy is paid up at last.

Now and then you get so mad at things in general that you sit down and write a long letter to your congressman asking him what the hell does the government think it is doing anyway.

It comes as something of a minor shock to you to realize that by now you are probably too old to inherit money from anybody.

Your son is beginning to show a little gray in his sideburns.

If it weren't so much trouble, you wouldn't mind having a couple more grandchildren.

Occasionally your wife says something that is worth listening to because it makes real sense. You wonder how the old girl got so smart all at once.

Reading a column such as this makes you feel so old you look in the mirror to see if your wrinkles actually are getting wrinkles.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Dear Abby:

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Yes, a person does have right to die with dignity

DEAR ABBY: I hear they are trying to pass a law making it legal to let people die just by discontinuing treatment. They say it will be used so old people who are incurably sick won't have to linger and suffer after all hope for recovery is gone.

The thought of this is frightening. WHO will decide who is old enough and sick enough?

If you know anything about "euthanasia" which in plain English means "mercy killing" please state your views.

CONCERNED IN MIAMI

DEAR CONCERNED: "Euthanasia" literally means "the good death," and I am all for it. I believe it is cruel and senseless to prolong life by artificial means when there is no hope for recovery.

The right to die with dignity should be everybody's right. The Euthanasia Education Council (whose meetings I have personally attended) in New York, has made available "A Living Will." It reads as follows:

"To My Family, My Physician, My Clergyman, My Lawyer: If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stands as the testament of my wishes:

"If there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental or spiritual disability, I (name) request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or heroic measures. Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity and old age—it is the one certainty. I do not fear death as much as I fear the indignity or deterioration, dependence, and hopeless pain. I ask that drugs be mercifully administered to me for terminal suffering even if they hasten the moment of death.

"This request is made while I am in good health and spirits. Although this document is not legally binding, you who care for me will, I hope, feel morally bound to follow its mandates. I recognize it places a heavy burden on responsibility upon you, and it is with the intention of sharing that responsibility and of mitigating any feelings of guilt that this statement is made."

Sign document in the presence of witnesses, and give it to your family physician, attorney, and-or a member of your family. (Better yet, obtain three copies, and give each one a copy. I did.)

"A Living Will" document may be obtained by writing to: THE EUTHANASIA COUNCIL 250 W. 57th St. New York, N. Y 10019

The document is free, but since this is a nonprofit organization, donations from $1 and up are gratefully accepted. One woman sent $500 saying: "This is the most marvelous thing I've ever heard of!" I agree.

DEAR ABBY: Cigaret smoke makes me sick. Yet if someone asks, "Do you mind if I smoke?" I find myself saying, "Not at all. Go ahead." Then I could kick myself. There must be a better way to handle this.

NO GUTS

DEAR NO GUTS: There is. The next time someone asks: Do you mind if I smoke?" reply: "Not if you don't mind if I choke!"

DEAR ABBY: Randy and I both attended the University of Oregon and plan to be married sometime this summer. Randy has been writing our marriage service and he has one part in there I am not so sure of. He wants me to say, "I (my name) promise to love, cherish, and live in Oregon with (his name) in sickness and in health, poverty and wealth, etc."

I love Oregon, too, Abby, and I'm afraid if he includes that in the marriage service, people will laugh, and I don't want anybody laughing during the marriage vows.

Should we leave it in?

ELSIE IN EUGENE

DEAR ELSIE: Tell Randy that living in Oregon is a privilege—not a duty, and to leave it out!

Today's highlight in history:

On this date: In 1792, Congress established the U.S. Mint.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Confederate President Jefferson Davis and most of his Cabinet fled from Richmond, Va.

In 1882, the outlaw, Jesse James, was shot and killed by a member of his gang in St. Joseph, Mo.

In 1932, Charles A. Lindbergh turned over $50,000 to an unidentified man in a Bronx, N.Y., cemetery as ransom for his kidnapped son.

From

WILLIAM H. HARSHA

6th District, Ohio

WASHINGTON — Recently, the details of the Administration's special revenue sharing proposals for elementary education were revealed to the House Education and Labor Committee.

The legislation received a rather cool reception — to say the least — from both Republicans and Democrats alike on the committee. It is very unlikely, therefore, that the committee would report these proposals favorably to the House for passage.

On the other hand, it is also unlikely that the Administration would be very willing to consider extending the present educational aid programs if the revenue sharing proposals are not passed or until a compromise agreement can be reached.

THIS DEADLOCK is a very serious matter and poses a very real dilemma for the 19,000 public school districts in America. Current federal programs for aid to education will expire at the end of this fiscal year (that is, on June 30).

Unless some sort of legislation is agreed upon, these districts could face the prospect of beginning the new school year in the fall without federal aid.

Consequently, I do believe that — in the event of a stalemate — some sort of continuing resolution would be enacted to prevent this.

The $2.7 billion Administration proposal would convert the 30 categorical grant-in-aid programs into five block grants to assist: disadvantaged children; the handicapped; vocational training; federal employee impact areas; and support services such as textbook purchases and school lunch programs.

Two programs — library services and strengthening state departments of education — would be eliminated.

OF THESE, the proposal to alter the formula payment of money to states for improving the education of low income or disadvantaged children has attracted the most controversy.

First, it would supplant the popular Title I program now funded through the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965. For fiscal '74, states would receive at least 100 per cent of the amount they received last year, but in the following years, the states which now spend more than the national average per child from their local and state funds would lose money.

HEW statistics indicate that under this formula, Ohio would get more money for the education of disadvantaged, going from $46.5 million in fiscal 73 to $49.9 million in fiscal '75.

AFTER the state allotment has been determined, the money would be distributed in such a way that areas with a high concentration of disadvantaged students — with the highest poverty ranking — would receive funds first.

In addition, no school district receiving less than $10,000 in federal aid would receive an allocation, and the whole proposal would eliminate approximately one million students from the 6.1 million disadvantaged now served under Title I.

The "strings" attached to this provision would also require that 75 per cent of the money allocated for disadvantaged students must be spent on reading and mathematics.

Of the other categories, I am particularly concerned that the quality of vocational education, education of the handicapped and special services is not diminished by special revenue sharing changes. All three would be combined into one allocation for each state. While 43 per cent of the total allocation would be for vocational education, and 16 per cent would go to the handicapped, up to 30 per cent of these amounts could be switched to any other category except impact aid.

I would have to be assured that the Sixth District of Ohio schools — where the vocational money is particularly needed — would not get lost in the shuffle for these funds.

There is very little question but that these revenue sharing proposals face an uphill battle in the Congress and that time is running out for the current programs.

Whatever the shortcomings of the latter, however, I do not believe the existing laws should be allowed to expire if the differences cannot be resolved, for the losers in the battle would be neither the Congress nor the Administration, but the school children of America.

Balloons move logs in Northwest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The best way to move big logs out of the woods is by balloon, says Faye H. Stewart of Eugene, Ore.

It's not only cheaper and faster but also ecologically much better, he feels.

Stewart, a lumber executive, uses balloons 110 feet tall and 108 feet in diameter and says he's been transporting huge logs commercially for 10 years.

"Three years ago it reached the point where it was economical," he said Friday between conferences with legislators and government officials.

"We fly logs, from the point at which the tree is felled, down the slopes to where trucks wait on roads, and they never touch the ground," he added. "We pick up from one to seven or eight logs on each turn."

"This method leaves the ground undisturbed—there's no siltation or erosion—and it cuts roadbuilding costs by more than half. We used to use helicopters for the same purpose, but this method is only 25 per cent as costly."

Stewart says his balloons hold 500,000 cubic feet of helium and have a lifting capacity of 24,000 pounds.

Ohio Perspective

Legislators seek action on Lake Erie erosion

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Several legislators from northern Ohio — aroused by the marauding waves and winds off Lake Erie— are pushing the state action to fight shore erosion this year.

In a series of bills and resolutions, they propose a variety of solutions ranging from state acquisition of lands already damaged to making property owners eligible for federal flood insurance.

Strict zoning regulations with criminal penalties also are being proposed to assure proper land management and conservation.

Hearings could last throughout much of the 1973 legislative session, sponsors said.

Rep. James Mueller, D-74 Chesterland, sponsored two of the measures along with a broader proposal which would seek to protect flood plains throughout the state based on flood patterns in Ohio in the past 100 years.

Rep. Donald J. Pease, D-54 Oberlin, has introduced a broad proposal to protect flood plains along Lake Erie and to make property owners eligible for federal flood insurance.

Freshman Rep. John T. McCormack, D-18 Euclid, presented a House resolution in which Ohio would ask President Nixon to enter into negotiations with Canada for joint efforts to clean up and protect the lake.

One of Mueller's bills would create a "Lake Erie Erosion Fund" and allow the state to acquire erosion-damaged land for recreational purposes. The state would pay a price equal to the market value of the land before it was damaged. The state would be authorized to develop the land itself or lease it for recreational purposes.

The measure would appropriate $2 million to be used for that purpose in the 1973-1975 biennium starting July 1, 1973.

Mueller has another bill that would have the Department of Natural Resources make extensive surveys and develop "full and accurate maps" of all lands that have been damaged by erosion or inundation.

The Department thereafter would make recommendations as to land used to counties, townships, and municipalities for the adoption of zoning regulations.

Officials of the political subdivisions would be required to hold public hearings, giving owners of properties listed on the maps a minimum for four weeks' notice.

After regulations were adopted, violators could be subject to a charge of a first degree misdemeanor punishable by six months in jail, a $1,000 fine, or both.

Man gives up job to return to circus life

So the 47-year-old Schwerdtfeger is giving up his job as a display manager of a large Topeka, Kan. department store to return to the calliope and the nomadic, hurly-burly life of the circus.

Ernie Schwerdtfeger is a clown.

"Being a clown is something you just can't get away from," says Schwerdfeger, who began a career in show business at the age of 3. It gets in your blood."

Over the years, the veteran entertainer has performed during the circus season, as a song-and-dance man, as a clown and as an escape artist. He has also filled in as a catcher for aerialist acts.

In the off-seasons he has done display work for department stores across the nation and done sculpturing in papier mache and fiberglass.

Schwerdtfeger won't be going back to the circus alone. He's taking his wife, Mary Belle, four stepchildren, and 5-month-old son, who Schwedtfeger says he wants to become an aerialist— "he has the muscles for it."

'Ladies Night' observed by Jud-I-Ques dancers

Jud-I-Ques square dance club observed 'ladies' night' with a Sadie Hawkins dance Saturday in Eastside School. Everyone was costumed as a "Dogpatch" character and since it was ladies' night, the ladies chose their partners for the first square dance. Robert Cotner was the narrator.

Three-legged race was won by Ed and Marilyn Knisley, and the strong arm contest by Mike Knapp.

The "Legend of Sadie Hawkins" was acted by Mrs. Cotner as "Sadie" and Ed Knisley as "Hekzibiah Hawkins."

The race to catch a husband for the re-hitched ceremonies was in charge of "Marryin' Sam" played by Chet Howell. The weddings were priced at 50 cents, $1 and $1.50. The $1.50 weddings were the those with flowers and veils. The vows were sealed with a kiss (using elbows only).

A "guzzlers contest" was held while square dancing. The prize for the biggest guzzler went to David Knisley.

Kris Smith won the hog calling contest and Richard Blessing the liar's contest. The kissing booth and wishing well were in charge of Mina Knisley as "Daisy Mae." Photography was by Mrs. Willard Judy.

Other games were conducted by "Ma Hawkins" and square dancing to the calling of Jim Lambert. Hillbilly "Some-more-gas-bord" was enjoyed with delic cies as cracklings, turnips, cornbread and apple butter, bologna, etc.

The Jud-I-Ques guests were members of their Sunday night class and others from Washington C. H. and Chillicothe representing the Crosstrailers Club, Belles and Beaus and the Buckeye Twisters.

'Drugs' WCTU topic

Washington C.H., Woman's Christian Temperance Union met in the home of Mrs. Homer Garringer Friday afternoon.

The meeting was opened with Scripture reading by Mrs. John Case. Miss Mabel Briggs read an article "Christ on the Cross".

Mrs. Cloyce Copley, who presided, read a letter from Mrs. Cullen Barth, state WCTU treasurer, expressing thanks for the contribution received in memory of Miss Ruby McBride. Mrs. Copley reported on a luncheon meeting which she, Mrs. Eldon Bethards and Mrs. Alice Bush attended in Hillsboro recently. The theme for discussion was "Share in Prayer Circles".

Mrs. Bethards read a letter saying the state president Mrs. Lucille Lafferty, and Mrs. Lois Bell were in an auto accident, and that both are confined to Marion Hospitals.

Glue sniffers destroy the cells in the human brain and once destroyed they can never be replaced he said. Morphine and Codene are very dangerous and only about 5 per cent of heroin users can be cured he declared.

He said the habit starts at the Junior High level.

Following the meeting, Mrs. Garringer served a dessert course, assisted by Mrs. Williard Wilson and Mrs. Thomas Willis.

The next meeting, April 27, will be at the home of Miss Norma Dodd, with Mrs. Hugh Smith assisting. Mrs. Garringer will present the program.

U.S. air force "Fat Boy" Diet

Lose 20 Lbs. in 2 weeks!

That statement insults your intelligence. You didn't get fat overnight and you won't get slim overnight. Anybody that promises you otherwise is after your money. You want to lose weight not money. Right?

Thousands of men and women have lost weight with the "Fat Boy" diet. U.S. Air Force flight surgeons and dietitians recommend the "Fat Boy" diet. It is a no starvation diet an average person can easily follow at home, work, or while traveling. If fad diets were everything they claim (frankly they're not!), the Air Force would use them and not the "Fat Boy" diet. Common sense tells you the U.S. Air Force research facilities are superior to those of a mere fad diet promoter. Take advantage of their research — after all, your taxes paid for it.

"Fat Boy" diet money-back guarantees a loss of 5 lbs. per week. That is 20 lbs. in only 30 days — that's really a lot! Try lifting 20 lbs. sometime. If you are tired of carrying your extra weight, you owe it to yourself to try the "Fat Boy" diet.

Men entering nursing in volume after centuries away from it

UNIFORM STYLE — To meet the need for coordinated apparel for male and female nursing students, Liz'beth Designs has a new collection of coordinated ensembles. The uniforms, designed in easy care doubleknit Encron polyester, are available with colorful braid trim to match school or class colors. Debra Kubitsky, left, wears a turtleneck, modified A-line style in white with gold piping and a gold blazer. Student nurse Dale Smith wears a modified turtleneck tunic, also trimmed in gold, with a matching blazer. Both are students at the Ashland State Hospital School of Nursing.

By AP NEWSFEATURES

NEW YORK (AP) — NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP) — When most people think of the stars of the nursing profession they think of Florence Nightingale.

of the 11th century, the celebrated knights of the Middle Ages banded together in military nursing orders to build hospitals to care for the sick and wounded.

Somewhere along the line they released their foothold and nursing became a women's profession.

But times are again changing. Men see nursing as a new frontier profession. Enrollmennt in schools of nursing across the country reflect this new attitude. Such schools and professional associations are recruiting men on a massive scale, pointing out veterans benefits for education and scholarship assistance.

In 1953, total male enrollment in nursing schools in Ohio was 18. In 1971, the fall enrollment in just one city in that state, Cleveland, was 49, according to the National Student Nurses Association.

Former military medical corpsmen are being hired by hospitals to supplement professional nursing staff and encouraged to continue their training to enter the nursing field.

Many men in safety professions, such as police and firemen, are studying in evenings. At Hunter College - Bellevue School of Nursing in New York City, the experimental nursing program trains such safety personnel for a second career after retirement.

The American Journal of Nursing recently featured an article suggesting that the new image of the profession would require a name change. Health Care Practitioners was suggested as a new title for nurses and School of Health Care Practice was the name suggested for schools of nursing.

Nuclear power plant work behind, but hopes brighten

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nuclear power, once hailed as the solution to the nation's energy problems in the 1970s and beyond, is falling far short of the goals set for it.

Costly delays in getting nuclear power plants into operation could contribute to some power shortages this summer and next winter, according to the Atomic Energy Commission.

But the AEC and the 10-year-old atomic power industry contend that nuclear power is going to be a major source of U.S. electricity, and in time to help offset especially critical energy pinches envisioned for the 1980s.

Still, the industry has only 29 nuclear plants in operation, compared with 46 forecast by the government two years ago. A total of 57 plants are under construction, but 90 per cent are at least a year behind schedule.

Causes of the delays range from technical difficulties and labor problems to stiffer licensing requirements and environmental issues, according to federal and industry officials.

The delays are serious enough to raise questions about the ability of government and industry to step up the pace of development, especially to help meet energy requirements in the next decade.

AEC and industry spokesmen concede the going has been rough in recent years and serious difficulties remain, but they say 1972 may have represented a turning point away from their problems.

—Besides the plants now operating or under construction, 77 others already are contracted for, including a record 35 ordered in 1972. The 35 plants together would generate 42.5 million kilowatts, almost three times the present nuclear generating capacity which provides about four per cent of the nation's electricity.

The AEC says a similar amount of nuclear generating capacity is expected to be contracted for in 1973, adding that "the situation on construction slippages is viewed as temporary and continued strong growth of nuclear power additions is expected to occur."

—Industry commitments for the 77 plants now on order amount to about $50 billion in capital costs. For example, Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago, one of the nuclear industry leaders, has announced it will spend at the rate of $1 million a day for the next five years on construction, most of it nuclear.

But AEC and industry optimism must be weighed against the fact that currently it takes up to nine years from initial planning states for a nuclear plant go into operation.

Still, the AEC appears confident that such lead time can be shortened and now forecasts that by the end of 1980 the nation's nuclear power capacity will be nearly 10 times greater than present.

By mid-1980s, the AEC and the utilities industry say, nuclear power will contribute 34 per cent of the nation's electricity and by the turn of the century 60 per cent, with the help of so-called nuclear breeder reactors.

The AEC concedes it has had to lower slightly projections made a little more than a year ago for nuclear capacity in the early 1980s, but it said its forecasts are "still within the probable range suggested "in earlier predictions.

What are the chances of meeting these forecasts?

Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., chairman of the Joint Senate-House Atomic Committee, said in an interview that there's no guarantee that they will be realized. "So far previous projections haven't been correct."

Price added that "while there is not an urgent need for nuclear power right now, it has to begin to show up as a major source of electricity from the 1980s on or we're in desperate trouble."

Price said his committee asked the AEC some time ago "to tell us what they need in the way of legislation" to speed the licensing process. But the AEC has yet to come up with suggested legislation, he said.

The AEC says tough new environmental laws established in 1969 and protests by environmentalists have figured in some construction delays.

A review of the environmental compatability of 100 plants in operation, under construction or planned played a prominent part in a hiatus of 17 months ending in May 1972 during which no major licensing actions were taken. Both the AEC and industry have charged some environmentalists with using unjustifiable delaying tactics.

But the commission indicates that most of the construction delays have been due to other reasons, including:

—Lack of standardization in plant design. On this score, L. Manning Muntzing, the AEC's director of regulation, says a factor "impending the acceleration of licensing decisions has been the tendency for nuclear power plants to be built on a one-of-a-kind basis. Some new plants are larger and more complex than their predecessors, while others incorporate design changes which make them different without apparent advantage."

—Late delivery of equipment. This was one factor contributing to the delay of three plants of the Tennessee Valley Authority at Decatur, Ala.

—Labor problems, including strikes and low labor productivity. These were among contributing factors responsible for the delay of Consolidated Edison Company's big Indian Point 2 plant north of New York City.

—"Quality assurance difficulties," that is, problems arising from component equipment "not manufactured under specifications under which it was ordered." This, says the AEC, was among the problems besetting Duke Power Company's 841,000 kilowatt Oconee 2 plant at Seneca, S.C.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader has urged the AEC to declare a moratorium on building all proposed nuclear power plants and those in the early construction stage "until all safety-related issues are resolved."

Nader and an organization called the "Union of Concerned Scientists" also recommended power cutbacks of up to 50 per cent at all 29 nuclear power plants now in operation.

Nader and the scientists' group declared "the danger of catastrophic nuclear power plant accidents is a public safety problem of the utmost urgency in the country today."

The AEC, in a draft of a proposed new report to Congress on the safety of nuclear reactors, says the chances are only about one in 100 billion each year of a truly major accident, one releasing 5 million curies of radioactivity. A curie is equivalent to the radiation released by one gram of radium.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)
A day of mixed influences. Some uncertainties may prove irksome, but don't fight shadows. Clear thinking needed.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)
Be careful in your approaches now. Others may read more into your words and actions than you intend.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)
Personal relationships governed by beneficent influences. A day in which you can successfully combine business and pleasure.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)
You man encounter an unusual — and knotty — business problem. Don't try to solve it by taking short-cuts. Only well-tested methods will work.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)
An excellent day for considering new business arrangements — especially if they involve real estate or property improvements.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)
You usually like to solve your own problems but this is a period in which another's idea may have more merit than your own.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)
A good day for trying to push through a unique program. You will get backing from those in authority — IF you make the first move.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)
An occupational situation may tax your ingenuity but cast aside any doubts of your ability to handle. By midday, you'll have the answers you need.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)
You usually have good control of your emotions but feelings are likely to run high now, so be forewarned. Maintain the judicial calm for which the Sagittarian is noted.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)
Some confusion in day's early hours can be cleared up if you just roll with the punches. Trying to crash your way through it will only worsen matters.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)
Scutinize all documents carefully now. In contracts or estimates, especially, you should regard any kind of escape clause as suspect.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)
You may receive a job offer which entails greater responsibility but, along with them, your opportunities will multiply. Think carefully.

YOU BORN TODAY are governed by Aries, zodiacal Sign of strength, purpose, versatility, mental and physical vitality. You have a magnetic personality, enjoy people, seeing new places, travel for adventure. You love to entertain and you make many friends along life's way — but you sometimes lose them through overaggressiveness or an occasional tendency to "talk out of turn." Try to curb these traits — for your own peace of mind. There are many fields in which you could carve a successful career but, with your gift for words, you would probably enjoy writing the most. If you do not take up some form of literature as an occupation, you would surely enjoy a hobby along these lines. Other excellent outlets for your talents: Music, the theater, the law, politics, sculpture.

BLUE RIBBON CHAMPS

Claudia Becht, Miami Trace Foreign Exchange Student from Germany, was the honored guest speaker at the Blue Ribbon Champs 4-H Club Meeting. She explained how she got to come to America through the AFS Program, showed slides of her home country, and answered questions from the interested 4-H club members.

In Julie Frost's absence, Jeff Smithson read her report on "Your Personal Health Record." Each member was given a Health Record Booklet to fill out so they would have a complete Health History of their medical protection, dental care and medical examinations.

Mark Holloway began his health report on "There Are Smiles," by pointing out that people who have happy smiles, have sound teeth. He then gave a few pointers on how to care for your teeth.

"Rural Fires . . . Prevent'em or Fight'em," was the topic of Eddie Armintrout's safety report. Eddie gave each member a booklet containing facts about fires and a checklist on how you, your farm and community rate on fire prevention.

J.T. Perrill gave his safety report on "Bicycle Safety." He pointed out the necessary equipment on bicycles, such as lights and reflectors, to insure safe riding at night.

Darla Krupla gave a talk on "How to Give a Demonstration." She pointed out several things judges would look for in demonstrations given at the fair, such as originality, appearance, delivery and conclusion.

Two new members, Wayne Matthews and Cindi Bright, were introduced to the club, and dates for the program and constitution committee meetings were set.

Terri and Raymond Mick led the club in a game of "Pass the Mousetrap, which was enjoyed by all.

Battles under way across Cambodia

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Government troops are reported fighting their first major offensive operation in 15 months, but other units closer to the capital have fled under Communist pressure.

Field reports said Communist forces drove the government soldiers from Prasat Nsang Khmau, 33 miles south of Phnom Penh. The reports said 50 government soldiers were killed and 80 wounded in the battle Saturday before they reached the town of Chambak, four miles away.

Another government garrison about 15 miles southeast of Chambak was hit by about 1,000 rounds of mortar fire Saturday, and those troops also rushed to Chambak, according to the reports.

As they fled, the reports said, the government soldiers were pursued by two American armored personnel carriers captured by the Communists. The evacuating troops left behind five 105mm howitzers, six mortars and eight trucks loaded with ammunition.

The new offensive by the Cambodian government is against Khmer Rouge guerrillas holding Mt. Kirirom, 60 miles southwest of Phnom Penh. The campaign has not been announced by the military command, but the army newspaper The Resistance said in its Sunday edition the operation got underway March 25.

This report said the government force had captured several positions at the foot of the mountain, but the Communist rebels remained well entrenched on the mountain's summit.

It was the first time the Cambodian army has gone on the offensive since December, 1971, when it tried to open the highway from Phnom Penh to the provincial capital of Kompong Thom, 80 miles to the north. That drive failed and government casualties were heavy.

American bombers kept up their pounding of Communist positions in Cambodia. The U.S. Pacific Military Command in Honolulu reported B52 heavy bombers and fighter-bombers carried out raids Sunday at about the same intensity as those of past weeks.

Ohio voting reforms advocated

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio General Assembly may find itself being bypassed in a Democratic Party move to take an election reform amendment directly to the people next November.

The Ohio Democratic Executive Committee met here Saturday and voted to create a special committee to keep a watch on the progress of pending election reform measures in the legislature.

Democratic leaders adopted a resolution calling on the Ohio Republican Party and all other political parties in the state to join in urging the legislature to pass election reforms.

State Sen. Marigene Valiquette, D-11 Toledo, warned that the Democrats have "some balance now" that they didn't have before they took control in the House.

The committee also voted Saturday to place Henry Donnell of Paulding County on the Democratic State Central Committee, replacing Robert Reider of Port Clinton, who resigned.

The election reforms urged by Democrats include:

—Confining to a single question as to voting residence the information that could be required for registration.

—Eliminating a requirement for boards of election to send post cards to confirm that a voter's residence has not changed.

—Allowing challenged voters to cast their ballots with the challenge to be resolved after the election.

—Extending the deadline for initiating recounts from five to 10 days after an election, and requiring election board financing of recounts if there is a difference between candidates of 1 per cent or less of the votes cast.

—Placing the burden of proof on the secretary of state if he rejects an election board appointment on grounds of incompetence.

—Requiring boards of election to publish voter directories and make them available to the public.

—Holding Ohio's non-presidential year primaries on the first Tuesday after the second Monday in September, and holding them on the first Tuesday after the second Monday in June in presidential election years.

—Eliminating a requirement that candidates' petitions be notarized.

—Eliminating a requirement for absentee ballots to be notarized.

Fern A. Miller, 47, Rt. 2, was treated at Memorial Hospital Saturday morning for a contusion of the right temple after her car and a semi-rig collided at the U.S. 35-Hutchinson-Yeoman Road intersection. She was released.

Sheriff's deputies said the crash occurred when a semi-rig driven by James W. Humphreys, 32, Charleston, W. Va., attempted to pass the Miller car which was making a left turn onto Hutchinson-Yeoman Road.

Humphrey's was cited for passing at an intersection. Mrs. Miller's 1972 model car was extensively damaged.

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES charged Harry C. Mongold, 50, of 1013 Willard St., with failure to yield right of way after a car-truck crash on the CCC Highway-W at Matthews Road Sunday afternoon.

Damage to both vehicles was moderate. A passenger in the Mongold truck complained of an injury, but was not treated at the time.

Tax estimate due April 6

CINCINNATI — If your total estimated income tax and self-employment tax for 1973 exceeds your income tax withholding by $100 or more, you should file a declaration of estimated tax, Paul A. Schuster, district director of Internal Revenue for Southern Ohio, Points out.

Form 1040-ES contains detailed instructions on how to file. The IRS sent this form to everyone who filed a declaration last year and to others who, according to IRS records, probably should make a declaration.

Schuster said vouchers and pre-addressed envelopes were included in the tax return package for the taxpayers' convenience.

Estimates for 1973 are due by April 16, the same date that 1972 federal income tax returns are due.

The 1040-ES Forms are available at local IRS offices for those who need them but did not receive copies in the mail.

You may also be required to file a declaration of estimated tax if you have more than $500 in income not subject to withholding, if you are retired or will retire soon, or if you income exceeds certain limits.

Ohio transportation chief to address Democrats

J. PHILLIP RICHLEY

J. Phillip Richley, director of the newly-created Ohio Department of Transportation, will be the principal speaker at the Fayette County Democrat Club's annual spring dinner Friday at the Terrace Lounge.

A social hour will open the program at 6 p.m. followed by a roast beef dinner at 7 p.m.

Tickets, priced at $5 per person, may be purchased by contacting Richard Kimmet (335-4699), Milbourne Barney (335-7514) or Joe Murphy (335-8359). Reservations must be made by Wednesday.

RICHLEY has had a distinguished career in transportation planning and highway engineering.

Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan has called Richley "uniquely qualified for this extremely important and difficult job," pointing to his "vast experience not only in administration and in engineering, but in the vitally important area of mass transit and its relationship to highway programs."

As head of the transportation department, Richley oversees the operations of four divisions, highways, urban mass transportation, transportation planning and aviation.

Prior to his appointment as highway director in 1970, Richley was Mahoning County engineer and served as president of the Mahoning-Trumbull County Transportation Study and president of the Mahoning Valley Regional Mass Transit Authority.

Richley attended John Carroll University and the University of Michigan and received his engineering degree in 1954 from Youngstown State University. In 1971 he was awarded an honorary Doctor of Engineering degree from Youngstown State University.

FOLLOWING a tour with the U.S. Navy, he worked as a draftsman from 1947 - 50. He joined the city of Youngstown as a surveyor and later became assistant city engineer, sanitary engineer, commissioner of engineering and finally director of public works. He was a construction engineer for the Ohio Department of Highways in 1958-59.

Richley is active in many civic and church activities, including the advisory board of St. Elizabeth Hospital, the advisory board of the Youngstown State University Technical School and the Choffin Vocational School, the Easter Seal Society, the Ohio County Engineers Association, the St. Anthony's Society, the Sons of Italy and the Italian-American War Veterans. He was named "Man of the Year" by the Italian-American Democrat League of Cleveland in 1972. He and his wife, Josephine, have two children.

Link fingerprints to missing coed

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A Milwaukee police official said Sunday fingerprints found in a car belonging to a missing Michigan coed are those of Orville Leland Davis, 30, of Ohio.

Detective Inspector Leo Woelfel said Davis' fingerprints matched those found in the car of Melanie Fahr, 20, Troy, Mich., who has been missing since Tuesday.

Thirteen Miami Trace High School students were among the 350 who displayed projects at the district Science Fair Saturday at Central State University.

Barbara Beal, David Foster and John Bryant, all MTHS juniors, and Milton Crum, a senior, received high scores and are now eligible to compete in the state Science Fair April 14 at the State Fairground.

Barbara's project of map scales of ancient maps was rated as one of the seven best at the district fair. Her work on this project will be footnoted in a book, "Maps of the Ancient Sea Kings," by Charles H. Hapgood, which is to be released this spring.

Foster's star atlas involved much experimentation with different films and developers to make a photographic atlas of the heavens. His project also was one of the top seven.

CRUM'S PROJECT used electrically charged water to precipitate smoke as a possible solution for smog control.

Although junior high school students are not eligible to go on to the state competition from the district Science Fair, John Beal, of Bloomingburg, Gary Foster, of Eber, and David Keim and Kim Vonley, of Jeffersonville, received high scores Saturday.

Five of the judges were from Fayette County. They were Bill Sollars and Darreil Debolt, of Agrico, and John Streber, Russell Hall and Harold Gass, teachers.

The table decorations were bowling pins painted and decorated to look like Cub Scouts and small wheelbarrow flower carts. These had been made by the Cubs, who also made the flower corsages for the mothers.

Cubmaster Robert Highfield introduced Roger Mesecher who gave the invocation. After dinner Highfield introduced John Rich, assistant Cubmaster, who gave special awards to Lee Lynch, Steve Osborne. Harvey Morgan, Woody Bereman and Jeff Mesecher. He also presented to John E. Rhoads a plaque of appreciation for his service to this pack for the past five years.

Boy succumbs after ingesting quantity of drugs

GOSHEN, Ohio (AP) — A six-year-old Goshen boy who ate a quantity of drugs he believed was candy March 24, died Sunday in a Cincinnati hospital without regaining consciousness.

Mark Stringer, of the Gaslight Village Mobile Home Park, went into convulsions after telling his parents he didn't want supper because he had eaten candy given him by friends.

Clermont County Sheriff Donald Watson conducted a house-to-house survey in an unsuccessful attempt to find out who gave the drugs to the boy.

He speculated other children may have obtained the drugs from a medicine chest and given them to Mark.

TV Viewing

NEW YORK (AP) — The 51st annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters has signed off, leaving the industry to worry about topless matters amid hope for good legislative news.

"Topless" radio talk shows that treat sexual matters lightly and with a leer emerged as a major concern for the NAB leadership at last week's convention in Washington, D.C.

On the positive side, the conventioneers decamped for home with optimism Congress will revise the Federal Communications Act to extend the three-year period that broadcast licenses now can be held and tighten the rules of competition for them at license renewal time.

The hope and worry are at particularly high levels this year because NAB is making a concerted effort to get Congress to lengthen broadcast licenses to five years.

Virtually all the 83 broadcast license bills now before Congress specify this period, according to a spokesman for NAB, which represents 3,620 radio and 534 TV stations, in addition to the four radio and three television networks in the United States.

It's a powerful group, but it moved briskly last Tuesday when the FCC said it was starting a "nonpublic" inquiry into alleged cases of broadcast obscenity.

By nightfall, the NAB's board of directors unanimously had adopted a resolution that in effect seeks to persuade NAB members and the entire industry to tone down or throw out spicy broadcasting that is causing heavy public and congressional gripes at a critical time.

FCC chairman Dean Burch hammered home the point the next day in a speech to the NAB's closing session. He assailed topless radio as "prurient trash," "electronic voyeurism" and "garbage, pure and simple."

He urged the industry to put pressure on tasteless broadcasters and praised the NAB resolution as a good start.

Ironically, despite all the congressional clamor over what many listeners say is obscenity or indecency, in topless radio, such programs aren't exactly rampant in America. There are about 12 on the air today, according to "Broadcasting," an industry magazine.

Jaycee cage tourney opens tonight

By MIKE FLYNN
Record Herald Sports Editor

The fourth annual Washington C. H. Jaycee Independent basketball tournament will open tonight at the Washington Junior High School gymnasium.

Four games starting at 6:10 p.m. will open the tourney, which has annually been a drawing card for some of the top basketball talent in the area.

A total of 10 teams have entered this year's shooting match and the field is headed by Wilson Lumber, the defending tourney champions, although no team has won consecutive titles in the three previous events.

WILSON LUMBER, an always-tough member of the Washington C. H. Independent basketball league, will plunge into tonight's action with probably the tourney's most flashy roster.

The Lumbermen have Mel Nowell, the former Ohio State whiz who helped them to last year's tourney championship, plus Fletcher Yates and Ron Coleman, both Wilmington College stars.

Wilson Lumber meets the Washington Savings Bank in tonight's third game, which will mostly likely start at about 8:30 p.m. and tops the four-game card. The Savings Bank team was the champion in the Washington C. H. Independent championship race this season and finished second in the Sabina Lions Club tournament over the weekend.

Injuries plagued the Savings Bank in its final game of the Sabina tournament against Sabina Uhl's IGA Foodliner, but the Bankers have added players from the Miami Trace Faculty team.

West Union, the champion of the Sinking Spring independent tournament two weeks ago, and Hill's Dairy Kream, of Mount Sterling, are billed in the opening game with Puckett's All-Stars, which is being sponsored by Hidy's Super Market, of Washington C. H., and Bob Roberts Construction Co., of Leesburg, meeting in the second contest. In the nightcap, Superior Carpet, of Wilmington, and Hiller's Fire Equipment Co. will clash.

DICK ANTHONY, president of the Washington C. H. Jaycees, said four games will be played on Tuesday night and three on Wednesday. The championship game is scheduled Saturday.

All proceeds realized from the tournament will go toward the Jaycee-sponsored Fourth of July fireworks celebration in Washington C. H., Anthony said.

Admission is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for students.

Don Gullett on mound for Cincinnati debut

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Don Gullett, the young lefthander who has drawn the prestigious opening day pitching assignment for the Cincinnati Reds Thursday, readily admits he has a lot to be thankful for.

Gullett, who's only 22, but is entering his fourth season with Cincinnati, will face the San Francisco Giants and Juan Marichal in the traditional opener before a sellout crowd in the Reds' Riverfront Stadium.

"Things, good things, have just kept happening for me," said Gullett, who battled hepatitis all last season while winning nine and losing 10.

"I guess all I can do is hope better and better things continue to happen."

The good things started happening for Gullett in 1970 when, with just one year of professional experience, he jumped from Cincinnati's Sioux Falls Class A farm team to the major leagues and recorded a 5-2 record while helping the Reds to a National League pennant.

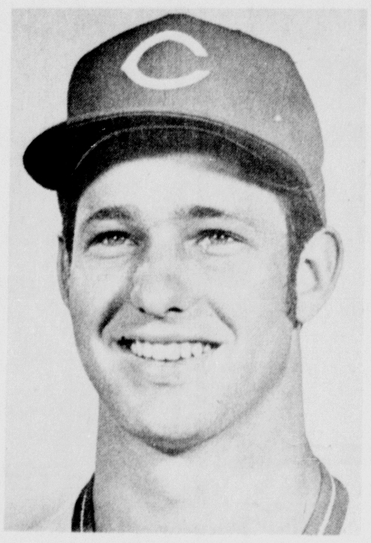
At 19, he found himself pitching in a World Series.

The next season, while the Reds were falling apart, Gullett won 16 and lost 6. Then came 1972 and his sickness.

But last year had a bright side—another pennant and a World Series.

"I'm just 22, and already I've been in two playoffs and two World Series. Now I'm going to get to pitch on opening day," Gullett said.

As could be expected, Gullett accepts the opening day assignment as an honor and also as a challenge.



DON GULLETT

"You want to get off to a good start," he said. "You want to be 1-0 and you want the team to be 1-0."

The butterflies that accompany any opening day will be there, of course, but Gullett's nature is such that they won't be apparent on the surface.

"I try to keep my emotions from showing," the Lynn, Ky., native said. "I'll be nervous, but that's not too bad. There's a difference between being nervous and being scared."

Bankers cop second in Sabina tourney

The Savings Bank, led by Gary Shaffer, downed Sabina Uhl's IGA Foodliner by a 93-83 score to force the finals of the double elimination tourney into an extra contest. The Bankers then dropped an 82-79 decision.

The Bankers, who finished the tourney with a 4-2 record, would have been forced to beat Uhl's IGA twice to win the championship.

Pearson picks up Atlanta 500 win

Pearson, 38, last December and proud of the grey in his otherwise coal black hair, stepped to the head of the class after Yarborough's departure and now has tacked eight big ones to the Woods lengthening list of major triumphs.

The latest came Sunday at Atlanta International Raceway when Pearson outdueled alumnus Yarborough to win the $111,225 Atlanta 500 that drew a surprising 72,000 persons to wet and muddy grounds.

Pearson, who now has won his last two starts, led 157 of the 328 laps in posting an average speed of 139.391 miles per hour. Yarborough, who won three straight Atlanta 500s for the Wood Brothers beginning in 1968, paced the field 153 laps.

There were two other leaders. Richard Petty, stock car racing's only $1 million winner, though Pearson is creeping up on that mark, was in front only two occasions for 13 laps early in the race.

Brewer wins award; East loses contest

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Jim Brewer had just scored 19 points, grabbed 14 rebounds, blocked five shots and stole the basketball a couple of times.

To his surprise, the 6-foot-9 Minnesota Olympian was named the Star of Stars, even though the East lost to the West 98-94 Saturday in the Coaches' All-Star Game.

"I felt somebody on the winning side would get the award," Brewer said.

"I was just trying to do what I know best, rebound at both ends and play defense. I didn't try to score that much," he said.

Brewer, who averaged only 14 points for the Gophers this season, scored all of his points in the second half, nearly leading the East to a successful comeback.

"When we put that second five in midway in the first half, we got to shooting better," said Watts.

The West, with seven players in double figures, pulled away to a 53-38 halftime lead and then withstood an East rally in the last seconds, ending a fourgame victory streak for the East.

"I made a mistake trying to give the players equal playing time," he drawled. "I'll never do that again. Some of those boys should have played the whole game. Some of the others should have just watched the whole game."

Jim Godman winner of bowling tournament

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Winning the Firestone Tournament of Champions four years ago was a highlight of his career, but Jim Godman says becoming the event's first two-time titlist "has to be my biggest thrill."

The 27-year-old Lorain, Ohio, bowler pocketed the $25,000 first prize Saturday after knocking off long-time great Dick Weber of St. Louis, 227-192, and then downing Barry Asher of Costa Mesa, Calif., 224-200, in the title match.

Nearly 300 attend

Coaches well-pleased with clinic turnout

Coaches from Washington C. H. and Miami Trace high schools were well-pleased with the turnout of nearly 300 persons at the all-age baseball clinic held Saturday at Washington Senior High School.

Rodger Mickle, head baseball coach at Washington C. H. who served as the clinic's director, said approximately 243 youngsters and 45 adults attended the clinic. The 45 adults included several Little League and Babe Ruth League baseball coaches, he said.

The clinic, which was held in the Washington Senior High School gymnasium because of Saturday's rain showers, gave persons of all ages in Fayette County an opportunity to receive valuable instruction on baseball techniques.

Six baseball caps, seven bats, 12 baseballs and three pairs of knee-length socks were given as door prizes.

Mickle thanked all who attended and participated and said the clinic staff will meet later this week to iron out the bus to make next year's clinic an even smoother event.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The $10-million dream, which ended with an explosion for Joe Frazier, faded quietly for Muhammad Ali.

His voice quieted by a broken jaw and his manner subdued after 12 rounds with a younger, stronger foe, Ali stood in his corner Saturday and heard what he probably had guessed: he had lost, amazingly to Ken Norton by a split decision.

A few months ago, before Frazier walked into several of George Foreman haymakers in Jamaica, a Frazier-Ali rematch loomed that would outdraw their "Fight of the Century" and give Ali the chance to erase the only blot on his record and retire as champion.

Instead, the previously anonymous Norton, 28, now is the logical challenger to Foreman, while the future of the 31-year-old Ali is in doubt.

The broken jaw "shouldn't hamper his career," Dr. William Lundeen, the supervising ring physician, said after a 1½hour operation Saturday night. But Norton's trainer, Eddie Futch, when asked about a rematch with Ali, said: "Sure, if the money's right. But right now we don't need him."

Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee, said Sunday that the boxer would be hospitalized "for two or three days" for the operation to wire his left jaw bone which was broken three-quarters of an inch apart.

Dundee said, "From all indications, he's going to be fine." He said "We've already talked and he asked how long it might be before he can get back in training."

Ali, who had won 10 straight since losing to Frazier, was a 5-1 favorite over Norton, whose 30 victims in 31 fights were even more obscure. But Norton helped even the odds by starting a rigorous training program Feb. 22 while Ali trained lightly until the final week.

Ali, who lost for the second time in 43 fights, earned $210,000 to Norton's $50,000.

Ali's jaw was broken early in the fight. Dundee, said it happened in the first round, though Norton didn't appear to land a solid blow in the round. Futch thinks it was in the fourth round.

Greensboro finale set today

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Most of pro golf's leading lights aren't overly concerned about a one-day delay in getting to Augusta, Ga., for the start of the famed Masters Tournament on Thursday.

"I don't think it makes any difference at all," said Billy Casper. "You'll still be able to play a couple of practice rounds and that's all you need."

Graham and Casper shared the lead at 199, a whopping 14 under par, going into today's rain-delayed final round in the $210,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

The Greensboro finish was pushed back one day by a series of rains that have deluged this area and turned the 7,021-yard, par-71 Sedgefield Country Club course into a quagmire.

Saturday's play was washed out by a 1½-inch rain. A double round of 36 holes was scheduled Sunday but the course was unplayable—with much of it under water—for the morning round and only the afternoon half was played.

That forced a Monday windup and delayed most of the players' travel plans for Augusta by a day.

Walton and Ratleff head All-Americans

NEW YORK (AP) — UCLA's Bill Walton and Ed Ratleff of Long Beach State led the balloting for the annual National Basketball Association College All-America Team for 1972-73 in coaches' selections announced today.

The first team also included Doug Collins of Illinois State, David Thompson of North Carolina State and Jim Brewer of Minnesota.

Sunday bad day for hurlers

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some of baseball's better pitchers tuned up Sunday for the approaching opening of the season but most were off-key.

Item: The San Francisco Giants rapped Oakland's Vida Blue for seven runs on 10 hits— including two triples and four doubles—in five innings en route to a 10-9 exhibition victory over the A's.

Item: The Milwaukee Brewers pounded Chicago ace Ferguson Jenkins for five runs in six innings and continued their 16-hit assault on Larry Gura for an 8-4 triumph over the Cubs.

Item: The Texas Rangers teed off on Kansas City's Dick Drago for seven runs and nine hits in four innings and held off the Royals 8-6.

Item: New York's Tom Seaver was supposed to go seven innings but was tagged for three runs and left after four innings because of a chewed-up mound in the Mets' 13-inning 3-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

Item: Pittsburgh's Nelson Briles shut out Cincinnati for four innings but Larry Stahl pinch hit a fifth-inning homer and, after a walk to Joe Morgan, Johnny Bench also connected as the Reds beat the Pirates 4-1.

Some others pitched well, but were simply outdueled.

Item: Ernie McAnally hurled eight innings of four-hit ball as the Montreal Expos blanked the Philadelphia Phillies and Cy Young Award winner Steve Carlton 3-0.

Item: Bob Gibson of St. Louis faltered in the second inning against three light hitters—Eddie Leon walked, rival pitcher Stan Bahnsen doubled and Buddy Bradford singled them both home—as the Chicago White Sox downed the Cardinals 2-0.

However, California's Nolan Ryan, Minnesota's Bill Hands and Cleveland's Steve Dunning came through for the pitchers' union.

Item: Ryan, who won 19 games last year and led the majors in strikeouts, allowed only two singles as the Angels nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1.

Item: Hands, acquired from the Cubs in a winter deal, gave up one run in seven innings as the Twins edged the Houston Astros 3-2.

Item: Dunning scattered four singles in six innings as the Indians blanked the San Diego Padres 2-0.

Elsewhere, the Boston Red Sox shaded the Detroit Tigers 6-5 while the Baltimore Orioles and Atlanta Braves traded seven home runs and 27 hits before they were halted after 14 innings by a curfew tied at 9-all.

Maintenance work scheduled

Routine maintenance projects will occupy most of the time this week of city, state and county road crews in Fayette County.

Bill Duncan, acting superintendent of the City Street Department, said crews will continue the street sign painting and straightening project. Other work on the schedule includes cleaning sewers, streets and catch basins.

County Engineer Charles P. Wagner said county crews will be widening berms and grading Robinson Road and Old Chillicothe Road. Ditch work is scheduled on Camp Grove Road and Robinson Road, and county crews will be installing culverts along other roads in the county. Crews also are scheduled to resume work on Railroad Street in Jeffersonville.

State crews, according to Superintendent Gene Fitzpatric, will continue to clean and paint equipment. Workmen will finish installing a culvert on Ohio 729, north of Jeffersonville, and will be sealing cracks on U.S. 62 and Ohio 734. Crews will also be patching highways throughout the county.

Fitzpatric also reported that a state crew has installed two poles on U.S. 35 at the intersection of Palmer Road, and two lights are to be placed there.

USO names Ohioan acting national chief

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — The United Service Organizations (USO) Inc., has named Michael E. Menster, 33, a native of Canton, Ohio, to be acting national executive director.

The appointment was announced Saturday night during a weekend banquet at the USO's annual National Council Meeting. The appointment is still subject to confirmation by the USO board.

Blast damages store

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Police say an explosion, apparently caused by a bomb, shattered the windows and front door of a local Lawson grocery store early this morning.

State eyes park near Columbus

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The last opportunity for the state to locate a major state park in the Columbus area may require purchase of 2,400 acres near the Alum Creek Dam in Dalaware County.

Ohio Natural Resources Department Director William Nye said a look at a map will show that "Columbus is a natural for a park and lodge." And Nye says the "Alum Creek project may be the last chance to get a park in the area."

Nye says $400,000 of the department's federal revenue-sharing funds are going to be used to purchase 400 acres. The remaining portion is to be acquired with grants from the federal government and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The dam is scheduled to be completed in May, 1974.

Virginia man killed in parachute jump

GALLIPOLIS, Ohio (AP) — Wayne Furr, 21, of Hopewell, Va., was killed Saturday in his first sport parachute jump.

Gallia County deputies said Furr dropped 2,800 feet when his parachute failed to open. He did not use his reserve chute, officials said.

He was a member of the Greene County Parachute Club in Xenia.

Lillian Gish's papers, given to the manuscript collection of the Library of Congress, show that she carefully annotated her scripts to achieve precisely the effects she wanted.

Famed German singer to become a director

He will conduct three concerts in 1974, March 21, 22 and 24.

Two weeks later, Fischer-Dieskau will return as soloist, with conductor Zubin Mehta and pianist Daniel Barenboim, who also sometimes conducts, for an all-Schumann program.

The baritone already has begun to conduct in Europe and has had a recording session in London.

Free concerts all set for historic U.S. sites

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Park Service and American Landmark Festivals are giving nine weeks of free concerts, two a week at two historic sites here.

The sites are Theodore Roosevelt's birthplace, where he lived for the first 15 years of his life, and Federal Hall, a site once occupied by the Capitol of the United States, where George Washington was inaugurated as President.

Historical exhibits at the sites will be open to visitors before the concerts and during intermissions. Music will include songs by the early American composer, Francis Hopkinson, whom Washington knew and liked.

Opening lead — ace of diamonds.

Partnership misunderstandings are certainly not a rarity, even in the highest echelons of bridge. Consider this deal from the 1969 Trials where George Rapee and Sidney Lazard settled in four hearts with a 4-1 trump fit, when all the time they could have made six clubs with perfectly normal play.

Rapee's diamond cuebid suggested that partner bid a new suit, but Lazard couldn't very well oblige. Instead he tried to show reasonably good spades and moderate high-card strength by jumping to three spades.

When Rapee bid four clubs, Lazard tried to indicate a heart feature in the form of a singleton by responding four hearts. Lazard thought his partner would not read this as a heart suit, since he had denied heart length earlier.

But Rapee thought otherwise — he assumed that South had three or four hearts — and passed.

Oddly enough, four hearts proved unbeatable! Lazard wound up losing a diamond and two trumps, and so made the contract.

Even if West had led a trump originally, declarer would still have succeeded. After cashing the A-K-Q of trumps and A-K of spades, felling the queen, South would play the jack of clubs.

Whether West covered or not, declarer would lead the jack of spades at the earliest opportunity and discard a diamond. Regardless of how the opponents elected to defend thereafter South would make ten tricks for sure, and if the defense slipped only slightly he would finish with eleven.

But despite the amazing outcome of the hand, we continue to recommend to our readers that they avoid 4-1 trumps fits!

Be Careful About Vitamins

With all the talk and concentration on vitamins, I don't recall reading any definitive article on the dangers of too much vitamin intake.

I read the numbers on the labels, but they have no meaning to me. One of the things that confuses me is the use of the phrase "daily requirement" on labels. If the particular pill fills the "daily requirement" need for certain vitamins, does that mean that food eaten containing that vitamin would be dangerously excessive?

Mrs. L. H., Maine

Dear Mrs. H.:

The emphasis, and sometimes overemphasis, on vitamins has introduced much confusion to many people.

One of the reasons for this confusion is that some manufacturers oversell their product by asking the consumer to compare the "numbers" on their label with that of another manufacturer.

It is understandable that "higher numbers" may seem to be more impressive than "lower numbers" even though the body may not require such a large quantity.

Fortunately, the wisdom of the body is such that it has its own protective devices against the excess use of some vitamins. That which is not needed is excreted through the urine.

Many physicians learn that some patients falsely reason about vitamins in the following way:

They believe that if one vitamin tablet is good, two are better, and three are best. Herein lies a real danger, especially to children.

Overzealous vitamin enthusiasts frequently take many times the prescribed dose for the prevention of a deficiency which they may not even have had.

Most vitamins, unlike excessive doses of Vitamins A and D, are not toxic and are relatively safe even in large quantities.

Too much Vitamin D can cause severe toxic effects in adults and especially in infants.

Children and adults need about 400 USP units of Vitamin D for daily requirement. When a deficiency is known to exist, treatment demands between 500 USP and 1500 USP units a day.

Vitamin A is the other vitamin that can cause multiple symptoms when taken in excess. The normal daily requirements for it are 5,000 USP units. When a deficiency is known to exist by the doctor, replacement treatment can go up to 50,000 USP units in adults, to control the condition.

The amount of vitamins in any food is not sufficient to cause hypervitaminosis in anyone taking vitamins in prescribed or reasonable amounts.

Pupfish being nurtured; thought wiped out by man

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California scientists are acclaiming the return of a tiny desert fish thought for 20 years to be extinct but now flourishing in three carefully guarded pools.

"This is a success story in an otherwise generally gloomy picture," Almo J. Cordone, senior fishery biologist for the California Fish and Game Department, said Friday.

The Owens pupfish survived for eons in a changing environment — from a vast inland lake to a string of shallow desert pools where water temperatures may vary between freezing and 100 degrees — but it very nearly did not survive its brief contact with modern man.

The Owens pupfish — whose natural range was only about 70 miles along the bottom of the narrow Owens Valley, northwest of Death Valley — is less than two inches long. Males are irridescent blues and purples with black bars and fin edges. Females are a mottled brown.

They evolved from pupfish common in a prehistoric lake that covered much of the Death Valley-Southern Nevada desert.

Isolated in pools and streams as the big lake dried up, the pupfish became capable of living in both alkaline and saline waters and of surviving sharp temperature changes in the shallow pools of the desert. They feed on algae, plankton, insects and smaller fish.

Plentiful as recently as 50 years ago, the fish were virtually wiped out by the intrusion of modern man, who drained their habitats and introduced alien species of fish that ate both the pupfish's food and the pupfish.

The pupfish declined sharply during the 1920s and 1930s. In 1942, scientists were unable to find any more, and the little creatures were considered extinct until 1956, when several hundred were discovered in a pool fed by overflow from a spring-fed drainage ditch.

Hampshire Field Day held here

More than 200 Future Farmers and 4-H club members spent Saturday afternoon judging swine at the Ohio Hampshire Swine Breeders Association junior field day, which was one of the features of the state association's show and sale, at the Fairground here.

Boys and girls, along with their advisors, filled the show arena for the judging of five classes of Hampshire hogs and participated in the educational part of the program, which included type discussion, showing of films on the proper way to select project pigs, swine facilities, fitting and showmanship demonstrations, a panel discussion and other sidelights of interest to the young people.

SCOTT JENKS, Jeffersonville, of the Miami Trace FFA chapter, was the high individual. Bill Ebersoll, Eldorado, a member of National Trail FFA was second. Stu Shepard, Hamilton, a member of the Talawanda Chapter at Oxford, placed third. Jim McCoy, Bloomingburg, a Miami Trace FFA member was fourth. Placing fifth was Jim Landis, Lewisburg, also a member of the National Trail Chapter. David Hiser was sixth and Gary Taylor placed seventh; both are Miami Trace Future Farmers.

In the junior division Debbie Fry, Waynesville placed first. Mark Holloway, Bloomingburg, a member of the Blue Ribbon Champs 4-H Club placed second. Debbie Roll, Greenfield, a member of Concord Blue Ribbon 4-H was third. Placing fourth was Claire Huffman, a member of Central Colony 4-H Club from Powell. Jon Wilt, Washington C.H. placed fifth and Scott Anderson sixth; they are members of Wayne Progressive Farmers 4-H Club. Greg Wayland, Frankfort, a member of Concord Blue Ribbon placed seventh.

The National Trail FFA Chapter of Eaton placed first in the team division. Talawanda FFA of Oxford placed second and the Miami Trace FFA placed third and fourth. Miami Trace team members were Scott Jenks, Mike Coe and David Hiser, Jay Mossbarger, Gary Taylor and Paul Mitchell. Diane Gerber and Gerald Reid were members of the seventh place team.

The show of Hampshires was held at 5:30 p.m. with Lester Jordan Jr., U.S. 35, showing the champion boar which sold for $275 to a breeder at Urbana. The champion open gilt was shown by Don Gostomsky, Tipp City, and sold for $305. The top selling boar was consigned by David Runyan, Urbana, and sold for $300. The top bred gilt was consigned by Lester Jordan and sold for $425.

Bidding was active on the 30 project pigs that sold at auction at an average of $58 per head. Many of the young people who had won buying certificates earlier used their discount to buy these project pigs.

The sale totaled $11,365. Emerson Marting was the auctioneer.

Door company buys building from Marting

Sam B. Marting, president of the Marting Manufacturing Co., 809 Delaware St., announced Monday that the building housing the company's Ranger Division has been sold to William Black, Washington C. H., president of the Chappell Door Co., of Jeffersonville, Ind.

Black said the company which manufacturers interior and exterior flush doors will move its operations here later this year as soon as the building is vacated by the Ranger Division and is extensively remodeled to suit the needs of the Chappell Co. The work of remodeling the office already has been started.

The Ranger Division, Marting said, will continue operations in the present location, formerly the Kirk Stockyards, until the new building on Rose Avenue, which will adjoin the main manufacturing plant on the west, is completed.

Larceny reports, vandalism investigated over weekend

A variety of complaints including a burglary and several reported thefts kept city police busy over the weekend.

Someone entered the Certified Oil station, 225 W. Temple St., overnight Saturday and removed two cases of oil, a battery and other miscellaneous items, police reported.

Officers said the burglary was discovered by Raymond Daugherty when he opened for business Sunday morning. The burglar had entered through a rear door to the station, apparently using a key. Police said the door showed no sign of forced entery.

Loss was set at $45.

Eleven plastic bags of women's clothing, valued at $250, were stolen from a garage at the Greg Sowders residence, 1019 Rawling St., sometime during the past 10 days. Police said the lock on the door had been broken to gain entry.

James Jarrell, station attendent, said a man in the station apparently had reached into the barrel-type drop safe and removed the money when Jarrell was outside pumping gas.

Two chrome valve covers were removed from the motor of a 1968 model car parked on the Don's Auto Sales used car lot Saturday night. Loss was set at $30.

Employes at the lot also reported that sometime Thursday night a light pole holding approximately 60 lights for the lot had been knocked down. The light bulbs and sockets were then crushed by the vandals. Damage was estimated at $60.

Girl, 4, injured in mower mishap

Sheriff's deputies said Annette G. Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Ellis, Rt. 1, Mount Sterling, suffered a laceration on her back in the accident. She was released after treatment in the emergency room.

The girl was riding on the mower with her older brother when she fell off backwards and hit her back on the mower housing, sheriff's deputies said.

Dry cleaning blaze causes $200 damage

Damage was estimated at $200 to a cleaning machine at Sunshine Cleaners, 76 Washington Square, when it caught fire Saturday night.

Firemen said the blaze was doused with an extinguisher by Patrolman William Cales who was in the area at the time. The motor overheated when the machine was overloaded, firemen said.

Milledgeville-Octa Water proposal shelved by board

No further action is to be taken at this time on a proposal for a central water supply system in the Milledgeville and Octa area, according to a resolution approved Monday by the Fayette County Commissioners.

The resolution states that "sentiment was overwhelmingly against the establishment of such a central water supply system." It also states that petitions received from Milledgeville indicated approximately 65 per cent of the residents are in opposition to the system and there is little prospect for industrial growth in either Milledgeville or Octa in the forseeable future.

The Commissioners stated that a feasability study was prepared by the engineering firm of Helms and Associates and the results were presented at a public hearing March 1. Little sentiment was expressed at the hearing in favor of the system, according to the resolution. The Commissioners also said that the current water supply in the area appears to be adequate.

The proposed project included the Rattlesnake interchange of I-71 and U.S. 35, Milledgeville and Octa Villages.

POW repeats statements against war

NEW YORK (AP) — Navy Capt. Walter Eugene Wilber says the anti-war statements he made while a prisoner of war in North Vietnam were the result of his conscience.

"I was not tortured," Wilber said in an interview on the CBS "60 Minutes" program Sunday night.

Asked why he changed his mind about the war after his capture, he said:

"I happen to be a Christian. I happen to be a professional naval officer. I happen to love my wife and children very much. I happen to love my country very much ...

"I found out that when I had time to think about myself, where I was, what we were doing, I found out that my conscience bothered me."

Wilber has rejoined his wife and three children at their remote Columbia Cross Roads home in the rolling hills of Pennsylvania's Bradford County.
